

CROSSIN

Player of the Year in 1991. The AP began naming a Player of the Year in 1998, choosing a winner in Big School (Class 3-4A) and Small School (Class 2A-A). Since 2002, a player has been chosen in each of the four size classifications.

Crossin averaged 18 points a game during the WVC regular season, but turned up the intensity once the postseason began. From the District 2 championship game to the state final, he averaged 26.1 points a game, including a 27-point performance against Kennedy Catholic in the state championship. Crossin helped lead the Queensmen to a 100-26 record during his four-year career. He finished with 1,857 career points.

Crossin expects to make his college decision in the next few weeks. The 6-foot-2 guard is being heavily recruited by a number of schools, including Division I Towson State. The Tigers are coached by Pat Kennedy, who coached Sura at Florida State in the early 1990s.

"Tim can play Division I basketball," said Belenski. "Right now, he's a 17-year-old young man. If he puts on 20 pounds, he'll become a man. He's an incredible basketball player who doesn't make mistakes."
