

Sports Week

Ryan Hargraves fishes from his grandfather's dock at Harveys Lake.

Irene Goresh, Tommy Ferullo, Brenda Davis, and Tracey Ferullo spend the afternoon on a dock at Harveys Lake.

One final fling

OK, the start of the school year next week means summer is almost over. Before you know it, the leaves will be changing colors and geese will be heading south for the winter.

Time to put away the bathing suit and forget about having fun on the water. Right?

Not so fast.

Plenty of Back Mountain residents have been taking advantage of the record-setting high temperatures by heading out to Harvey Lake. From swimming to water skiing to fishing, they're still having fun before the calendar says it's autumn.

Harveys Lake was also home to its annual Homecoming Weekend last week. Among the many activities were a silent auction, a lighting of the docks at dusk, a bass fishing tournament and a water skiing show. The weekend concluded last Sunday with a pig roast, the crowing of Little Miss Harveys Lake, a craft show, and lots of games for children.

Most of the events were held at the Lake-Noxen Elementary School near Sandy Beach.

Harveys Lake residents Sam Kapral, Mike Murphy, and Josh Pfeiffer enjoy a cool jump into the lake.

Alex Hillard of Harveys Lake trains his American water spaniels, Smidgen and Jake, at the lake.

Katie Ferullo has fun being tossed in the water by Harveys Lake Fire Chief Billy Davis.

PHOTOS FOR THE POST/CHARLOTTE
BARTIZEK

