Oliver named to Land Trust post

Tunkhannock resident Frank H. Oliver has been named Executive Director of the North Branch Land Trust. Edward J. Zygmunt, president of the board of directors of the regional conservancy, announced the appointment.

Oliver comes to the land trust after serving seven years as senior vice president of Goettler Associates in Columbus, Ohio. During his career, Oliver has served more than 30 nonprofit organizations through strategic planning, marketing, and resource development. Most recently, Oliver served the National Aviary, a conservation and education organization in western Pennsylvania.

"The land trust recently completed a comprehensive strategic planning process, and we searched nationwide for someone with the kind of organizational development experience Frank will bring to the organization," Zygmunt said. "We are certain that Frank is the right person who will take us to a higher level of conservation effectiveness."

Oliver is a graduate of the University of Pittsburgh, Carnegie Mellon University, and Columbia University. He takes over the helm from former NBLT executive director Linda Thoma, who will remain with the organization as its director of operations.

"Thanks to Linda's leadership over the past 10 years, NBLT is recognized as a premier land trust throughout the Commonwealth," Zygmunt said.

The North Branch Land Trust is a regional nonprofit organization serving the conservation needs of landowners in six northeastern Pennsylvania counties from its headquarters in Trucksville. NBLT focuses on the watershed resources that flow into the North Branch of the Susquehanna River and on the agricultural heritage of Northeastern Pennsylvania. The organization oversees land preservation agreements on nearly 7,000 acres of privately held property within its service area.
