An American powerhouse

DALLAS – After suffering its first defeat of the District 16 tournament – a tough 16-4 loss in which the team made seven errors – the coaching staff of the Back Mountain American 9-10-year-old baseball all-star team planned to make a number of changes going into the championship game.

"Mountain Top just killed us. It was, by far, our worst game of the tournament," said manager Greg Petorak, who was assisted by coaches Jeff Doggett and Frank DeBona. "So we got together to rack our brains and talk about the changes we needed to make."

It was a very short discussion.

With the exception of the starting pitcher, the coaches decided to keep the lineup intact going into the rematch against Mountain Top. And the move paid huge dividends.

Back Mountain American scored 10 runs in the first three innings and played flawless defense in the field en route to capturing the championship with a 14-2 win against Mountain Top at the Avoca-Dupont diamond.

"We decided the kids played one bad game and we should just keep everyone where they were," said Petorak. "They kids really responded well. They had every reason in the world not to play well, but they bounced back. The first (Mountain Top) batter of the game hit a ball and our shortstop made a great play. That got us going and everyone played well. I'm very proud of them."

American displayed a potent offense, averaging more than 10 runs a game in the double-elimination tournament. The team showed its power – especially for a team of 9-10-year-olds – by hitting five home runs during the tourney. In a game against Mayflower, the contest was tied 5-5 before American blasted back-to-back home runs and rolled to a 10-5 win.

"Our kids hit the heck out of the ball," said Petorak. "They're aggressive hitters. There's no bunting or looking for walks. I told our players that they could roll out of bed and get four or five hits. It was fun to watch them hit."

The team also had a deep pitching staff, said the manager. And with the exception of the first game against Mountain Top, American played well defensively in the postseason. The district tournament was divided into four divisions of seven teams, with the winners of each division playing in a double-elimination tournament for the championship.

"Having a deep pitching staff is key," said Petorak, "especially in district play because you play so many games."

The team also possessed an intangible as important as offense and defense – team chemistry.

"When we were picking the team, not only were we looking for good athletes, we were also looking for kids who can get along," said Petorak, who works as the chief financial officer for the Wilkes-Barre/Scranton Penguins. "These kids really hit it off. They had a good time. They knew there was a serious part and there was time for fun. After we won the (district) championship, I told the kids they should feel proud. They were part of something special."
