PLAY

berated and condemned by an unruly crowd of protesters.

The three scenes were part of "A Night at Club Pandemonium," a pre-Eastern performance attended by 500 people last weekend at the Back Mountain Harvest Assembly church.

As the vignettes unfolded, a group of demons jeered.

"Look at these situations," they told the Christ figure, who was played by Tim Conrad. "See how all these Christians are acting."

The Jesus character did not appear disheartened.

He scattered the protesters and put his arm around the teen-age girl, gently guiding her away from the clinic.

He touched the shoulders of the husband, who suddenly became inspired to rip up the divorce papers.

He comforted the woman at the hospital, helping her to accept her mother's impending death.

"We wanted to show that when Jesus touches your life, you make a change," said Nicky Carara, coordinator of the drama ministry at Back Mountain Harvest Assembly.

"When things aren't going well, when we give up on him or think he gives up on us, he is still there. He never leaves us. All we have to do it accept him. We have to invite him in. We have to be willing to do that."

The play, written and directed by church volunteer Phil Miller, featured a cast and crew of about 50 people, and came at a time of year when many church groups present plays with an Easter message of resurrection and redemption.

Commercial Print Sales & Services Manager

The Times Leader has an immediate opening for a Commercial Print Sales & Services Manager.

As a leading multimedia company in northeastern Pennsylvania, we offer a variety of products and services in and around the state of Pennsylvania. We are well equipped to handle a variety of print, packaging and mail/delivery processes for our clients.

Over the years, we have expanded into a multi million dollar operation. As a result of recent capital improvements to our state of the art production facility, we are poised for further growth.

The ideal candidate will be a high energy individual with an excellent work ethic, super people skills, and a drive to succeed. While a firm understanding of all aspects of production processes is important, significantly increasing sales of the commercial sales client base is Job #1. Persons with a business owner mentality are encouraged to apply. Candidates with printing as well as strong business to business experience with a history of proven success will be given highest consideration. We are looking for candidates with excellent verbal and written communication skills and problem solving abilities.

This position reports to the VP / Operations but works closely with the entire production management team.
