On July 10, 1925, in Dayton, Tenn., the so-called Monkey Trial begins with John Thomas Scopes, a high-school science teacher, accused of teaching evolution in violation of state law. The law made it a misdemeanor to "teach any theory that denies the story of the Divine Creation of man."

Dallas Borough Police Chief Edward Lyons reported that at about 11:40 a.m. last Wednesday he received a call from Russell Gula, custodian at the Hearthstone Pub, Main Street, Dallas, that Gula had received a telephone call indicating that a bomb would go off in the store at 1 p.m.

Gula identified the caller as a muffled male voice and said that he tried to keep the caller talking by replying that the Hearthstone was not a store. He said the person at the other end of the phone then replied, "the bomb will go off in the restaurant."

A second call was received at 12:55 and the caller again told Lyons, who answered that "the bomb would go off at 1 p.m." Police stayed outside the building for about 20 minutes. At 1:20 p.m. a third call was received when Lyons answered the phone no one spoke at the other end. A fourth call was received at 1:55 p.m. and the caller said that he would carry out his threat at a later date.

As a result of numerous complaints concerning careless use of fireworks over the holiday weekend Dallas Borough Council moved promptly on Wednesday night to ban the sale and the shooting of fire works in the borough in the future. Thoughtless celebrators were reported to have set off their fireworks near the home of several residents in town who are seriously ill, and to have ignored requests to move elsewhere. In one case firecrackers were said to have been thrown on the roof of a home where a woman was ill. Although there were no serious injuries, several children suffered burns celebrating.

Something new in educational entertainment for housewives — wherein instead of paying an admission fee, the audience actually gets paid for attending — is being planned for the Dallas section by Luzerne County Gas and Electric Company. On July 28, the company will send Mrs. Bertha Phillips Howe, its home economist, here to conduct an interesting program of "Everyday Cooking Miracles" in Dallas Borough High School auditorium.

There will be free gifts, but what's more unusual will be the opportunity for the women's organizations of all local churches to earn money, for the company will pay to any recognized unity, ten cents for every woman who attend the cooking school.
