SAVAGES

April 2 • Rated R; 113 Minutes

A beautifully nuanced tragic-comedy, the story involves two siblings (Philip Seymour Hoffman and Academy Award nominee Laura Linney), both floundering souls, on the cusp of middle-age, who are angry with each other. Reluctantly they are forced to deal with their estranged father (Philip Bosco), suffering from dementia. Constantly bickering over old and new problems, brother and sister try to figure out what is best for a man they hardly know as well as build a bond with each other. Described as a bittersweet X-ray of American family dynamics that any son or daughter can take to heart.

Rate R; 123 Minutes

This suspense thriller from Sidney Lumet about a heist-gone-bad boasts a stellar cast including Albert Finney, Rosemary Harris, Philip Seymour Hoffman (Capote), Ethan Hawk, and Marisa Tomei. Tragic from the opening shot, this graphic film tells the story of two brothers from a dysfunctional upscale Westchester County, NY family who plot to burglarize their parents' jewelry store in hopes of solving their monetary problems. Their risky plan falls apart, resulting in a series of tragedies they never could have predicted.

I'MNOTTHERE

April 9 • Rated R; 135 Minutes

A dazzling, experimental take on the life of Bob Dylan, popular music's most revered and enigmatic artist. The film incorporates Dylan's sprawling work, spanning several decades and genres. Six different actors portray Dylan in several incarnations, from childhood, to protest folksinger, to lyrical poet, to actor dealing with a marital collapse, to frontiersman infatuated with the Old West and American folklore, to a substance abusing, confrontational artist in the turbulent mid-1960s. Cate Blanchett and Richard Gere are among the actors in the role of Dylan.
