ference."

David and Donna enroll Andrew and Nicolas in studies to assist with cystic fibrosis research. The boys just finished a weight gain study and a study attempting to link a correlation between sleep apnea and diabetes to cystic fibrosis.

Despite having this life-threatening disease, Andrew and Nicolas manage to take part in typical children's activities. Within the past year, they have participated in football and basketball and Nicolas is playing baseball this spring. They are signed up to play soccer this fall and are members of Cub Scout Pack 281.

Donna is open about her sons' disease because she wants people learn about it. She is especially outspoken now because she knows once the boys become teenagers, they may be embarrassed and not want people to know.

"I'll never stop talking about it because it has to be known about," Donna said.

Because of Andrew and Nicolas,

CHARLOTTE BARTIZEK/FOR THE DALLAS POST

Andrew Matcho, 10, relaxes on a couch in his Dallas home. Andrew and his 8-year-old brother, Nicolas, suffer from cystic fibrosis. Members of the Matcho family will take part in the Cystic Fibrosis Foundation "Great Strides" walk on Saturday, May 3, at Kirby Park in Wilkes-Barre.

Donna decided to go back to school to become a registered nurse and will graduate from Luzerne County Community College in May. She plans to continue her education and obtain a Bachelor of Science degree in nursing.

Donna says prevention of lung infections is the best way to maximize the boys' lives. Although she and her husband are open with the
