Idetown Cemetery. They went back to Massachusetts for the winter. The following year, Nehemiah returned with his wife, Mary, their six sons, the three children of his brother Ezra and his nephew, Nathan Ide. They settled and built a Presbyterian church where the cemetery now stands. The church was eventually torn down and its materials were used to construct the Idetown United Methodist Church, which is closed but still standing.

Willis Ide, 83, of Idetown, was one of the family members present at the book's donation to the Back Mountain Memorial Library. He grew up in Dallas, married in the Dallas United Methodist Church in 1946 and built his Idetown home in 1952. Willis and his wife joined the Idetown United Methodist Church and attended services there until it closed and merged with the Lehman United Methodist Church. Willis claims it was his great-great grandfather who signed the papers for former Bedford Township to be sold to Lehman Township.

The book, purchased mostly by Ide relatives, sells for $65. weighs nine pounds and contains over 1,700 loose leaf pages.

"It's really a great book," Willis Ide said. "I've heard different people say after reading th book and (considering) price of the book, they've spent much more for college books with less historical value than it has.

In 2000, Ide descendants erected a statue of Nehemiah in the Idetown Cemetery where both Nehemiah and Mary Ide are buried.

There are an awful lot of us in the cemetery down here," Willis Ide said.

Recent Dallas High School graduate Rosemary Shaver used the book to complete research for her graduation project about her family, the Shavers, a founding family of the Back Mountain.

One hundred members of the Ide family attended the 106th Annual Ide Family Reunion at Frances Slocum State Park on June 28, 2008.
