

The town's snowman had the last laugh as even the LCTA bus had trouble getting through Dallas Center.

A snowy Back Mt.

Schools were closed, businesses were slow and the Back Mountain turned into a winter wonderland last Friday as Mother Nature dumped several inches of snow on the area, the first real snowstorm of the season. Area residents made the best of things, though, using the time to do some sleigh riding, make snowmen and even push the cars of their neighbors through the heavy white stuff.

Joellen Spencer, of Dallas, knows how to enjoy a good snowstorm.

Jim Considine, of Dallas, puts his plow to good use during snowstorms.

John Saba, of Dallas, is kept busy clearing the driveway of his Sterling Avenue home.

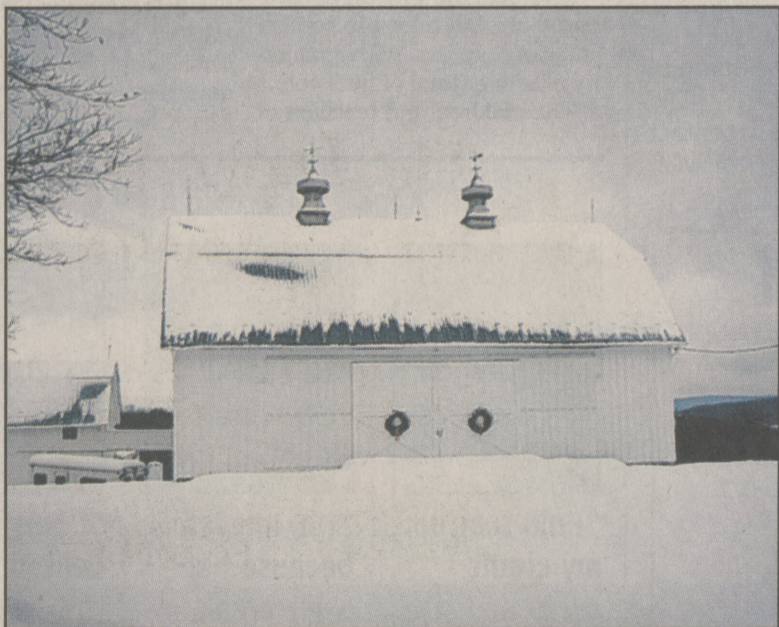

The Rev. Lynn Snyder cleans off the windshield of her car after shopping at the start of the storm.

The view down Sterling Avenue in Dallas during a snowstorm is picturesque.

Good Samaritans help a fellow motorist out of the snow banks at the Dallas Center intersection.

The storm ends, brightening this barn at the top of Friendship Hill in Dallas.

Resident commuters on Route 309 struggle to get home from work last Friday evening.