A Dallas student and coach recently enjoyed the opportunity of a lifetime when they got to work with Olympians and their coaches.

Kim (Perez) Kuzma, the Dallas High School diving coach, and Dallas diver Sarah Zerfoss participated in the USA Diving National Training Center Coaches Outreach Clinic Dec. 29-30 at Indiana University - Perdue University at Indianapolis (IUPUI). The two-day event was presented by Olympic diving coaches Wenbo

Chen and John Wingfield.

"The whole point of the clinic was for the Olympic coaches to bring in the coaches around the area and give them a heads up of what to look for in an athlete if they're going to make it to Olympics," Kuzma said.

Each coach attending the clinic was allowed to bring one athlete along. Kuzma chose Zerfoss, a freshman member of the Dallas High School diving team, to accompany her.

In addition to Chen and Wingfield, Kuzma and Zerfoss also worked with Olympic diving coaches Hobie Billingsley and Dick Kimball. United States Olympian divers David Boudia, Thomas Finchum and Mary Beth Dunnichay, along with up-and-coming Olympic diver, 12-year-old Steele Johnson, also took part in the clinic.

"He (Kimball) got her into dives that I never would have tried to get her into," Kuzma said of Zerfoss' experiences with Kimball.

Zerfoss, 14, of Shavertown, was in Kuzma's reading class at Dallas Middle School when Kuzma recruited her for an age group div-
