

Summer comes to an end

Autumn officially arrived on Tuesday, Sept. 22, but with it came some late warm weather. Back Mountain residents quickly took advantage of the weather, grabbing on to every last bit of summer they could.

Myrl Young talks about the history of her Dallas neighborhood and weeds out the raspberry stalks that have grown in the garden over the summer.

Sue Saylor, of Harveys Lake, helps her 15-month-old grandson Jack Kashatus cross the outlet dam.

CHARLOTTE BARTIZEK PHOTOS/ FOR THE DALLAS POST

Far left: Robert Lapanick, of Dallas, takes advantage of a long warm weekend to practice his skateboarding.

Left: Picking out the best of summer zinnias are, from left, Tena O'Connor, Abbey and Joy Hogan, of Harveys Lake.

Above: Ken Williams stands on his historic boathouse on Harveys Lake gazes into the water, wishing summer would never end.