Inspired by the true story of Tennessee recluse Felix "Bush" Breazeale who planned his funeral while he was still alive.

Few folks have spoken with Felix since he disappeared into the woods 40 years ago. Gruff, confrontational and ill-tempered, Felix has been the source of many malicious rumors over the years. His penchant for walking into town with a shotgun, a wild beard and threadbare clothes doesn't exactly give the impression of a man who seeks to make friends. When Bush walks into Frank Quinn's funeral parlor and announces his intension to throw himself a massive party before he passes away, word quickly spreads through town and anticipation starts to run high. Before long the big day has finally arrived and Frank surprises everyone by revealing exactly why he shunned society to lead a life of solitude in the deep woods.

- Sunday, Oct. 3 at 2:25 p.m.

The brief love affair between two 20th century icons is dramatized in this period drama. Igor Stravinsky was one of Europe's most promising new composers when in 1913 he premiered his ballet Le Sacre du Printemps (The Rite of Spring); the piece proved to be wildly controversial. One patron who did like the performance was Coco Chanel, who was already among Europe's most celebrated fashion designers. Seven years later, Chanel encounters Stravinsky at a party and learns that the composer is penniless and without a place to live. Chanel befriends him and allows him to move into her summer home in the country along with his wife, Catherine, and their four children. Chanel is nursing a broken heart after the recent death of her boyfriend and what begins as an act of compassion for a fellow artist turns into an affair of the heart as Chanel and Stravinsky become lovers.

JOHN RABE
