"There was a man who could barely move, and he kept his hands on the arms of his wheelchair," she said. "Opus sat next to him and the man slowly walked his fingers to Opus' head. Opus just knew he couldn't move until the man was done petting him, and he stood there like a statue. It was nothing I did."

Ide, who didn't volunteer very often before working with Kozmo, didn't expect her family pet would bring so much to the lives of hundreds of other people throughout the years.

The furry volunteers visit nursing homes, schools, hospitals and even participate in library programs where children learn skills by reading to the dogs.

"It's like a full-time job," said Ide.

Ide said having a service dog has completely changed her ideas about the meaning of man's best friend. Having "just a pet" is a thing of the past.

"That's boring," she said.

A resident of The Meadows Nursing Center pets Colleen, a yellow lab-golden retriever mix, from South Paws Therapy Dogs.

ing to participate may be less.

The Lions are partnering with Frontier Communications for the project to utilize their telephone poles and crews to place the banners.

Berlew said towns with similar projects are able to use street lights for the banners, but to post the displays in Dallas Borough, telephone lines will need to be used. This also means that banners will need to be larger because they will be placed higher than those in other areas.

While some of the details for the project are still in the works, Berlew just wants to get the word out about honoring the Back Mountain's veteran community.

"Freedom is not free, and they've been picking up the tab for many years," he said. "How can you thank them enough?"

Berlew hopes the signs will be displayed in prominent areas in Dallas, such as on Main, Church and Lake streets, as well as Memorial Highway, or Route 415.

Berlew is still creating sponsorship forms, but the tentative form pick-up locations will be at the Dallas Borough Building on Main Street, the Back Mountain Memorial Library on Huntsville Road, American Legion Post 672 on Memorial Highway, Frontier Communications on CTE Drive and NAPA Auto Parts on Route 415.
