50 years, her classmates still keep in touch and recently came to the aid of a classmate who became ill.

Then, comparing notes, Atherholt stated the new school in 1962 cost $1.5 million and Clemson said the new school in 2011 cost $43 million.

In a final farewell, Clemson used advice his mother always told him: "Do not wait for your ship to come in; swim out to it."

your future." School principal Abe Simon also offered encouraging words to the soon-to-be high school freshmen.

"You're smarter than you think you are; be confident," he said. "We all love you and will miss you."

The family atmosphere of the school resonated in graduate Maria Khoudary's speech on behalf of the class of 2011.

"They [faculty and staff] love and cherish us, just like second parents, which makes Gate of Heaven feel like a family," she said. "Gate of Heaven will always be a part of us and we will never, ever forget it."

Graduate Anthony Huntington had many fond memories of his school.

"All of my teachers, all of my friends, playing in the parking lot," and most poignantly, "the 'gator paintings' in the gym," he said.

Fellow graduate Christina McFarlane shared her feelings about leaving the school, but also expressed enthusiasm about the future.

"I'm sad that the school is closing," she said. "But I'm happy to be going to high school."

Students were not the only ones experiencing a bittersweet moment at the ceremony. Eighth-grade English teacher Diane Ruch also shared her sentiments about the last graduating class.

"They hold a special place in my heart," she said of the students. "I expect them to do very well in whatever they pursue."

After speeches were delivered, tears were shed and memories were revisited, it was evident that the final graduating class of Gate of Heaven was prepared for the future that lies ahead of it. The faculty and staff had become family and nurtured the graduates as such.

It was time for these young men and women to take the education and love they received and share their knowledge with the world. As graduate Tommy Calpin enthusiastically stated, "A whole new life is starting!"
