to come back," said Dewees, a Gate of Heaven parent.

About 200 attendees enjoyed a picnic-style lunch during the event and viewed old photographs and memorabilia from the school. Local Boy Scout troops associated with Gate of Heaven will use the collected photographs to make a commemorative DVD this summer, according to Cub Scout Pack 232 coordinator Amy Huntington.

Many of those who attended the Open House just wanted an opportunity to meet with fellow former Gators and reminisce on the school's history.

Carol Carroll, of Dallas, was a kindergarten aide at the school for nine years while her sons attended the elementary school until 1998.

"I even had withdrawal then," she said. "It's sad (that the school is closing)."

She said the school was a tight-knit kinship, and it's that feeling she will miss the most.

"It's a place where people who never knew each other before became family," Carroll said.

Barbara Ann Evans, of Dallas, is a 1964 graduate of the school which she credits with instilling her with confidence.

"It gave me the 'I can do what I think I want to do,'" she said of the school's lasting impression.

Parents of current students wandered the halls during the Open House, led by their little ones to see art projects and science displays. A sign posted on a wall in one hallway summed up the event's message: "Thanks for the memories."

Gator parent John Hornle, of Dallas, wanted to say "thank you" back. "I'm here to say good-bye to the good people I've met over the years," he said.
