laughing. "Cafeteria food fights, hide and seek, bouncy ball launching, class trip, assemblies and tight-knit academic classes were some of our greatest times together."

Hohol also reflected on the uniqueness of the school building, as well, including the temperature in the cafeteria and lack of soap in the restroom dispensers.

"It is these silly little things that I will miss the most," she said.

Valedictorian Stephanie Zeil's commencement speech was a feat all on its own - the usually quiet graduate said if she can talk in front of hundreds of people at graduation, students are capable of more than they think.

"According to the laws of aerodynamics, the bumblebee can't fly," she said. "It has way too big of a body and too teeny wings to physically become airborne. But bumblebees don't know anything about ... the laws of aerodynamics and they fly anyway. So, it is your choice whether or not to listen to the negative voices inside of you or outside of you."

Salutatorian Meghan Bloom said, while many things have changed over the years such as the switch from chalkboards to promethean boards and projectors, the "dynamic and entertaining" class was able to overcome almost everything together.

"Remember the memories you made and the people you've met," she told her classmates. "Learn from your mistakes and carry the lessons you've learned throughout your life."

Following the students' speeches, Principal Doug Klopp presented the Leadership Award to Hohol and Kristopher Karter, the Citizenship Award to Courtney Sult and Thomas Bedford and the James L. Nicholas Memorial Scholarship to Josh Everett.

"We're still undecided," he said. "It's been hard on us. My wife went to Catholic school and I went to public school, but we're just trying to figure out what's best for James."

Instead of focusing on the future, parents and family members found ways to celebrate the milestone with their children.

"They want to have a 'fire lunch,'" said Fino. "We'll probably take them to a Japanese restaurant."
