GO FIGURE! by Linda Thistle

Farmers eligible for loans

Sheryl L. Potocek, Farm Loan Manager for USDA's Farm Service Agency in Bradford, Sullivan, Wyoming, Susquehanna, Lackawanna, Wayne, Carbon, Monroe and Luzerne counties, announced that farmers in these counties are eligible for low-interest emergency loans from USDA because Pennsylvania was declared a Presidential Major Disaster area due to losses caused by Tropical Storm Lee.

According to Potocek, emergency loans can be used to restore or replace essential property, pay all or part of production costs associated with the disaster year, pay essential family living expenses, reorganize the farming operation and refinance certain debts.

Potocek says loans for crop, livestock and non-real estate losses are normally repaid within one to seven years, depending on the loan purpose, repayment ability and collateral available as loan security. In special circumstances, terms of up to 20 years may be authorized. Loans for physical losses to real estate are normally repaid within 30 years. In certain circumstances, repayment may be made over a maximum of 40 years.

Additional information is also available online at <http://disaster.fsa.usda.gov>. Interested farmers may contact the agency at 200 Lake Rd, STE D, Towanda, Pa. 18848 or by phone at 265-6969, Ext. 2.

Foods that have been submerged not safe to eat

Fresh fruits and vegetables that have been partially or completely submerged in flood water or that might have come in contact with contaminated water are not safe to consume. There is a high health risk of becoming sick from consuming these products.

Flood water may be contaminated with sewage, animal waste, heavy metals, pathogenic microorganisms or other contaminants. These contaminants are not only on the surface of the fruits and vegetables but may move into plant tissues.

The Food and Drug Administration considers these products "adulterated" and not fit for consumption. (Note: Pooled or standing water after a rainfall that is not likely to be contaminated should not be considered flooding.)

Produce from flood-damaged gardens should not be used or sold at the farmers market or farm stand. Produce should also not be used for home canning, freezing or other types of preserving.

If a garden is in close proximity to a flooded area but has not come in contact with flood water, prevent cross contamination by cleaning equipment, including shoes, before going from contaminated area into garden or fields.

If an unplanted field or a section ready for replant has been partially or completely flooded, treat soil as if it was treated with fresh manure. Do not harvest produce grown in field for 120 days. This will give time for bacteria to break down and any contaminants to be leached out of the soil.

As always, proper food handling methods in the kitchen are important for food safety. They include washing hands while preparing food, cleaning and disinfecting work surfaces, equipment and supplies; using potable water; and following the "if in doubt, throw it out" way of thinking.

Where plants are in water logged soil, but were not exposed to flood water, they may wilt. They also have a high chance of developing Phytophthora root rot and fruit rots (Buckeye rot of tomatoes and Phytophthora on peppers, eggplants and all cucurbits) will be promoted.

Gardeners with questions should call Penn State Extension in Luzerne County at 825-1701.
