compliance with the state law until August.

Supervisor Liz Martin suggested the township protest the law by not complying, but Solicitor Thomas Brennan said the township's power is given by the state, and lawsuits could arise from such an action.

The board also discussed enacting a gunfire control ordinance similar to the current laws enforce by the state gaming commission, but it would give power to the municipal police department to control non-hunting gunfire.

Resident Jaen Tolomello spearheaded the issue months ago due to increasing concerns about natural gas activities occurring where hunting often takes place.

The board also heard comments from new zoning officer Carl Alber about adopting the international property maintenance code, which would give the township more authority to enforce actions against nuisance properties.

Roadmaster Martin Barry told supervisors residents should be using biodegradable bags when the road department conducts its annual leaf collection. He said the cost for the bags is about the same as plastic bags, and the whole point of the project is to cut down on landfill waste.

The supervisors' next meeting will be held at 7:30 p.m. March 20 in the municipal building.
