Dietrich remembers 'Love Me Do'

During the month of the 50th anniversary of the release of the Beatles first single of "Love Me Do," the Dietrich Theater in Tunkhannock is hosting a free presentation chronicling the Beatles, a musical phenomenon that changed popular music forever, at 3 p.m. today, Oct. 21.

Pennsylvania Humanities Council Scholar Ken Womack will present a history of the Beatles in his multi-media presentation of "The End: Authorship, Nostalgia and the Beatles."

Many people can recollect their first memory of the Beatles and their impact on their lives. Sara Santa, of Tunkhannock, can remember seeing a Beatles movie at the Dietrich Theater in the 1960's (she is not sure of the movie, but it was probably "A Hard Day's Night") and during the movie kids, were dancing in the aisles.

Esther Harmatz, projectionist and supervisor at the Dietrich Theater, remembers just missing a chance to not only see a Beatles performance in New York City, but to actually meet them in person because her father wanted to get back home to Scranton.

What is your memory?

To relive memories or learn about the Fab Four of the Beatles, all are invited to an audio-and-video-oriented discussion by Womack sponsored by the Pennsylvania Humanities Council. Womack traces the group's creative arc from their salad days in Liverpool, through Abbey Road, to the twilight of their career.

In an effort to communicate the power of the Beatles' achievements, Womack examines the Beatles' body of work as an evolving art object. He investigates the origins of the group's compositions, as well as the songwriting and recording practices that brought them to fruition.

Through a carefully choreographed multimedia presentation, Womack reveals the ways in which the Beatles gave life to a musical synthesis that would change the world.

Superintendent James McGovern commented on the bus incident on Harris Pond Road that happened earlier this month during the Oct. 15 Lake-Lehman School Board meeting. On that day, a school bus was run off the road by a truck carrying a wide load.

A meeting was held with several officials, including State Representative Karen Boback, Senator Lisa Baker and PennDOT regarding this incident and other traffic problems in the area. McGovern said he personally saw a dump truck fly through a school bus stop sign on Harris Pond Road. State police patrols have been increased and the area will continue to be monitored.

Tracey Halowich gave a report on the district's state testing that showed results from last year and changes taking place regarding test types and standards.

She informed the board that the district made Adequate

Yearly Progress as determined by testing scores. The district as a whole scored 78% proficient in math and 81% proficient in reading. Scores by grade levels and schools can be viewed by logging onto <http://paayp.emetric.net>.

Lake-Lehman is participating in Project Readers with Lehigh University, a program that focuses on early reading intervention that is free to the district. Halowich explained that the district will switch from the PSSAs to the Keystone Exams, an end-of-course style exam that members of the Class of 2017 will be required to score proficient or advanced on during their junior year in order to earn a diploma.

Keystone tests will be administered from Dec. 3-14 to all juniors and sophomores who have completed biology. In the spring, testing will be held May 13-24. Juniors will take the algebra and literature exams, while freshmen and sophomores enrolled in algebra 2, biology and world literature II will take these exams.

The school board postponed voting on agenda items regarding Berkheimer, pending the solicitor's review and approval. The item in question is whether or not to allow Berk-
