that decision was not made until approximately 6:20 a.m.

McGovern said that some Lake-Lehman students get picked up by 6 a.m. For his district, the decision to have a two-hour delay or a cancellation needs to be made no later than 5:45 a.m. before buses are on the road. Because snow didn't start to fall until later in the morning on Tuesday, McGovern felt it was safer to get students to school before the roads got worse, and then wait it out until the end of the day when roads were clear.

"The only time it gets tricky is when the private schools make a different decision," said McGovern. West Side Career and Technical Center also had a two-hour delay on Tuesday.

"This is one of the first times we have had a situation like this arise," he said. Because of the communication between districts, schools are usually on the same schedule but on Tuesday, Lake-Lehman students who attend West Side CTC were given a study hall period until buses were up and running.

Before decisions are made, both Galicki and McGovern contact the director of the bus companies serving their respective districts. For Dallas School District, that means calling Jeff Emanuel, whom Galicki relies on to give him an evaluation of roads in the district. If Emanuel feels the roads are slick, he will offer an opinion on whether the district should have a delay or a closing.

If officials change the status from a delay to a closing, they make that decision by 8:30 a.m. before buses are on the road.

In other weather situations, like when an overnight storm is anticipated, decisions are made a little differently.

"We like to make a decision by 10 p.m. when there is a storm pending so it can make the 10 or 11 p.m. news," Galicki said.

In the case of a cancellation, every district handles make-up days differently. Galicki has found that working snow days into the end of the year works best for his district. He noted that some districts will take days out of extended holidays such as Easter break but because families tend to make travel plans during those times, attendance is poor.

If there is a delay, the school day counts as a full day. McGovern said that, in delay scenarios, elementary classes determine their schedule by room while students in upper grades follow a condensed schedule. High school students have each of their scheduled classes, though they are shortened.

Both superintendents stressed their main concern when making these decisions is the safety of the students, personnel and drivers.

professional assessment and determine if there are water problems at the current police station. Resident Jason Miller asked council if residents could volunteer to do handy work at the current station and if the borough could cover the cost of materials.

"We've been talking about this too damn long and nothing gets done," said Miller.

Blaine added that the borough has the funds available in its restricted cash account to fix plumbing and water issues.

The council passed Boice's proposal.

Giordano suggested running a pipe under the road to connect the police station to the borough building. Borough Secretary Susan Sutton stated that the borough officials looked into having this done before and that the cost was very high.

In other business:

The high school team forms the opposition, with a few recent graduates and players who will join the program in the near future rounding out the roster.

Sheehan makes it part of his holiday weekend. He returns from his home in State College to visit family and long-time friend Matt Lipo for Thanksgiving. There is a Friday night reunion for the soccer alumni on the same weekend each year, followed by the Saturday morning game.

"We reminisce for a while on Friday night, then come out here and have a good run out for two hours," Raub said.

Players and parents from the program continue that reminiscing as they arrive minutes before the start.

The game, despite being informal without officials, is well played.

The alumni even fought off whatever rust was in its collective game to score first about 10 minutes into this year's contest.

"We've got to get them early while we still have energy," Raub said. Then, we bunker down and hide, put everyone back and let the young kids just play around with it."

When that doesn't work, there is another way for the alumni to come out winners on their annual trip down Memory Lane.

"We go to a shootout at the end every year," Raub said. "We just say 'the alumni win.' Whether it's legal or not, we always win."
