set against the backdrops of the Great Depression, the Civil Rights movement and the shifting contemporary landscape of today. Danced to hit standards from the 1930s, 1960s and the 2000s, the show features 14 dancers, four vocalists and a five-piece orchestra. The show celebrates timeless love and its power to defy society's invisible rules that use explosive movement and storytelling. The show opened Sept. 28 at the Fulton Theater in Lancaster.

"It would be fun to bring this show to Wilkes-Barre, to tell everyone 'This is my act now,'" said the hard-working, engaging dancer from Shavertown.

In her newest role as choreographer and dancer, Shavertown native Jaime Verazin comes down to earth to handle social issues through a dance production called Standard Time that she hopes to bring to Broadway and also to the Kirby Center with fellow dancer Alan Green.
