The new abutments and piers rest on the same cribbing as the old bridge, only a small part of the wood work being taken out. This timber was made into canes and the Reverend considers himself fortunate in having been able to secure one of these relics.

Letters From Our Soldier Boys

daily, so we do not have a chance to get stiff-jointed. I will close for this time, will try and keep in touch with you as I go along. The Bulletin is reaching me regularly and I am glad to read it, which furnishes much pass time while not on duty.

Yours, "Robin."

Letter from Warren Greenawalt France, Jan. 28, 1918.

Dear Parents, I don't know if I can think up enough for a letter, that will pass the censor.

I am still at the same Naval Aviation Base but don't know how long I will be here for this is a receiving station and all men on drafts come here first and are then transferred to other stations in France.

I may be kept here on a permanent detail, a few of us fellows work too good they want to keep us here.

Yesterday (Sunday) was the first Sunday we didn't work so a few of us fellows took a walk out through the country, it is very interesting to see the old buildings and castles several hundred years old.

The fields are not filled with corn and grain as our fields; every where you look you see vine-yards of grapes. The French are great for their wine, they have wine every meal.

I will be a regular Frenchman when I get home; I learn more French every day.

Another interesting thing is the railroad system, they are much behind America with railroads. Their vehicles are drawn by dogs, oxen and donkeys.

I will close for this time, it is getting late. Next time I will try to write a more interesting letter.

Your son, Warren.

P. S.—I see by the papers that you are having very cold weather in the States. We are having fine weather and winter is over. We are having regular Spring weather.

After writing this letter I found I am on a draft for another part of France.

A Strong Wind The wind was so strong early Tuesday morning that considerable damage was done thruout this section. Fences and trees were felled at many places.

At the residence of Jos. R. Charles on New Haven street, the chimney was blown off the house.
