GREENTOWN, March. 23— Nipert and Son started their mill at Coreytown this week with the intention of sawing their entire winter stock.

We think if the teachers, of Greene would have a good local institute where they might exchange views and receive some instruction in regard to ways and methods of teaching, and how to teach a successful school, it would be of far more beneschool, it would be of ar more bene-fit to both teachers and pupils than a wishy-washy method of exchang-ing visits for the sole purpose of visiting and receiving a mess of candy, and other stuff to tickle the palate, which only serves to spoil the minds of the pupils for a whole

Incentives to study should be of a different nature. The power and ability of a wide awake teacher does pleasing parents and children. What does the wooden man of Greene think of it? OMEGA.

That Wonderful Merry-So-Round.

LAYTON, N. J., March 2ird 1806. MR EDITOR :- I have heard so many ask what that nerry-go-round down at Centroville is like that the spirit sort o'moves me ne of the best houses in the neighborhood. our prominent citizens answered the T. R. Julius Klein Miss Della Crone who has been visiting query by saying, "Oh! it only a grand or sister Annie, at Easton, returned last drank," but that is such an awfully crude explanation that I have hardly recovere Frank Smith, of Philadelphia, was here from the shock yet. It is enough to throw one into spasms to think of such a thing. Married at noon to-day John Ward, of Bushkill, to Miss Susie Howell, daughter of Levi Howell. The Dingman's Ferry poetry around the subject as it were. Most merry-go-rounds go with a wheezy old en gine, or turned by a crank, but this one runs by Jersey lightning so you can truly see them leave here, but what will be this merry-go-round has to have the light-Dingman's less will be Jersey's gain.

S. L. Sarles, who has been sick is out it in bottles you know, and give it a dose ning fed to it from storage batterles. Keep gain, and able to come up town and tack- whenever the motion slacks. Score on for Centreville for adopting a new force to an old, old movement. This machine has quite a number of parts, but when it gets in full motion it appears to be nothing but legs and arms with a stove in the centre, and although it is nearly new it makes a clatter to raise the dead. The timber of which it is composed is not all grown at Centreville; the best probably comes from the limestone ridges west of the village, though occasionaly a little choice timber that it is liable to draw in any one stand-Paupac was entertained at Ira Killam's ing by, then it becomes rather erratic, and on Wednesday evening, March 18th. If it is essential to your understanding of this narration to know it is absolutely correct, I will on hearing from you to that effect get the manager of the merry-go-round to send you an affidavit and then you will probably know less about it than you do now. This machine separates automaticaly when the seance is over, excepting the bar-room stove, which is the pivot around which the merry-go-round revolves. After separating the various parts b wonderful to tell farmers, editors, butch ers, poets, etc., and wander around the world acting their several parts, until the time comes for the club to meet, when more wonderful to tell the component parts again come together by mutual attraction, and the machine after a few doses gets into regular motion. I saw a statement netime ago that the editor thought if there were a few more doors it would save the machine the trouble of poking its heads through the windows so often. I fear this is not the exact language of the editor, but when the butcher gets some ice under his hat he will be able to tell you all that I may have forgotten.
