BURKE COCKRAN'S SPEECH.

This distinguished orator in a recent address at the dinner of the Chamber of Commerce in New York spoke in an eloquent manner of the feelings of those Democrats who like himself supported McKinley at the recent election, because that was the most direct and effectual means of defeating the heresy which had permeated the organization and which still possesses it.

He said, "those forces of disorder are still in the field, being marshalled by their defeated leader for who never permit any half way a new assault upon credit and indus. methods when they undertake to actry," hence asked he, " how can we complish an object, the supper afford to disband the forces of order proved a great success both as a the gold dollar by increasing its which aided to overcome them in means of replenishing the Lyceum the late campaign ?"
