The Democratic Editors in this section who thought the tide among their readers was setting toward free silver coinage last fall seem to be very mum just now, and it is hard to tell by reading those papers what they do think about it at present. Were not their convictions genuine or are they only waiting to see how the cat is going to jump. I wonder what their readers think of this "on the fence" policy. No doubt they will eatch the current again before next fall, and volubly assure the dear people that they are for bi-metallism first, last and all the time.
