EDITORIAL.
THE GLEN PURCHASE.
In another column we print a communication on the subject of the proposed purchase of the Glen. We cordially endorse the sentiments of the writer, and wish to be recorded as favoring the project, can it be lawfully accomplished. The question of price is one which admits of honest difference of opinion, and while intrinsic value is one thing, circumstances and surroundings and a wise foresight oftentimes warrant this to be subjected to a degree to other considerations, but neither should sentiment wholly control the matter. Disinterested judgment should temper such negotiations, and while it is in the province of the owner to fix the amount and refuse to consider a less sum, it is equally the duty of the proposed purchaser to be governed by a spirit of fairness to both the owner and the public, and to pay such price as may be consistent with actual value and the benefit to be derived to the town from this ornamental acquisition.

No one can object to improvements which add to the comfort and prosperity of the Borough, but care should be exercised that they are not allowed to mar the natural beauty of the place more than is absolutely necessary. Centre Square has always been without shade trees, at least on three sides of it, and now that small maples have been planted along High St. it seems that the authorities should not allow telephone wires to be strung directly over them. In time there will be an interference, and it is easier to obviate the possibility when such work is being done, than to remedy the difficulty in the future.

The Town Council should enact an ordinance against tacking any thing on the trees or telegraph or telephone poles in the Borough, if no authority now exists for preventing it. This too common practice is an injury to the trees, makes them appear unsightly, and is an use for which there is no real occasion.

The Democratic aspirants for Congress in the Eighth District are beginning to show up. Now gentlemen put your "claims" on exhibition that the voters may see the kind of stuff there is in them.

Prehistoric Dentistry.
George Byron Gordon, the explorer, contributes an article on "The Mysterious City of Honduras" to a late Century. The article gives an account of recent discoveries at Copan. He says:

"No regular burying ground has yet been found at Copan, but a number of isolated tombs have been explored. The location of these was strange and unexpected—beneath the pavement of the court yards and under the foundations of houses. They consist of small chambers of very excellent masonry, roofed sometimes by means of slabs of stone resting on top of the vertical walls. In these tombs one, and sometimes two interments had been made. The bodies had been laid at full length upon the floor. The coramets had long since mouldered away, and the skeletons themselves were in a crumbling condition and gave little knowledge of the physical characteristics of the people, but one fact of surpassing interest came to light concerning their private lives, namely: the custom of adorning the front teeth with gems inlaid in the enamel, and by filling. Although not all the sets found have been treated in this way, there are enough to show that the practice was general, at least among the upper classes; for all the tombs opened, from their associations with prominent houses, seemed to have belonged to people of rank and fortune. The stone used in the inlaying was a bright green jadeite. A circular cavity about one-sixteenth of an inch in diameter was drilled in the enamel of each of the two front teeth of the upper row, and inlaid with a little disk of jadeite cut to a perfect fit and secured by means of a bright red cement."

Dairy Feeds.
Bulletin 41 of the Pennsylvania State College on tests of dairy feed, comparing buckwheat middlings, dried brewers' grains and cereals for milk and butter production. The general opinion is that the above are equally valuable when fed judiciously, as part of a balanced ration.

That none of these foods produced a determined effect upon the flavor or quality of the milk and butter and that in view of these results the choice of these foods would depend entirely on their respective cost. That, with the prevailing prices for dairy products and food stuffs, and with good cows, milk and butter can be produced at such cost as to leave considerable margin of profit for the dairyman. These experiments, therefore, prove the truth of what we said last week regarding the profit in milk even at low prices, especially if the farmer will confine his feeding more closely to the products he can raise at comparatively little cost, such as hay, corn stalks, corn meal, and buckwheat, with the small amount of linseed meal he might buy. Feeding for profit is a science, but one easy to master, and thoughtful farmers will note carefully the advantages to be gained by a study of these experiments made for their particular benefit and information.

Signing the Declaration.
When the greatest document of human liberty since the day of Magna Charta was finally passed, it is related that John Hancock, in signing the document "in letters large enough for George III to read without spectacles," urged upon his comrades the necessity of "hanging together in this matter." "Yes indeed," interrupted the facetious Ben Franklin; "we must all hang together or assuredly we must all hang separately." "When it comes to hanging," said Harrison, the luxurious, heavy gentleman from Virginia, (ex-President Harrison's great grandfather), to the little meager Gorry of Massachusetts, "I shall have the advantage of you. It will be all over with me long before you will be done kicking in the air." The glad news of independence was communicated to the throngs in the street, and a tradition asserts that the old bellman in the tower tolled the knell of tyranny and rang in the birth of a new nation, "great, glorious and free," amid the joyous acclamations of the crowd.—Ex.

Lafayette's Prayer.
May this immense temple of freedom ever stand a lesson to oppressors, an example to the oppressed, a sanctuary for the rights of mankind and may those happy U. S. attain that complete splendor and prosperity which will illustrate the blessings of their government and for ages to come rejoice the departed souls of its founders—Lafayette's Farewell Speech to the American Congress

The Fourth This Year.
Under this title the American Agriculturist makes some very appropriate and sensible suggestions, and says it should be something more than a noisy day. It possesses a new and larger significance and should be observed with befitting dignity. The object in each town or county should be to so arouse the whole people that with diligent economy of funds but with liberal contributions of personal service by old and young, exercises may be conducted that shall fitly express those great principles.

1. The popular satisfaction with republican institutions, regard for our forefathers who established them, honor to the heroes of 1861-5 who perpetuated them.
2. Our delight that the prejudices begotten by the revolution are passing away, but our universal joy over the abolition of the sectionalism caused by the Civil war.
3. Our desire for the most generous development of this spirit of national unity that knows no north or south, no east, no west, but one country, one flag, the republic imperishable.
4. Our support of the government in the present war, our regard for its intrepid forces on land and sea, whether in victory or defeat, and especially our love for the brave men at the front from our own locality and state.
5. Our purpose to help our men in army and navy, and especially those dependent upon them at home, with our sympathy, our services and freely with our money. A generous collection for this purpose would be far wiser and more patriotic than to spend the money for fireworks.

8 and lastly. Our confidence in a glorious future for America, our faith that with the help of the God of nations this people shall work out the problems which destiny has in store for a government and a civilization that more than ever are to be the hope and inspiration of the world.

Dangerous Odors.
The Boston Transcript tells its readers what smells are dangerous. A single sniff of highly concentrated prussic acid will kill a man as quickly as a shot through the heart. The odor of a bad egg is due to the presence of sulphuretted hydrogen, and the objectionable perfumes of sewers and bone factories are attributable chiefly to the same gas. Chemical laboratories are famous for bad smells. Berzelius, who discovered the element called "selenium," once tried the experiment of permitting a bubble of pure hydrogen selenide gas to enter his nostrils. For days afterwards he was not able to smell strong ammonia the olfactory nerves being temporarily paralyzed. Selenium gas has the odor of putrid horse-radish. Tellurium is even worse. There is a story of a physician whose patient, a lady, refused to take an absolutely necessary rest because she was so fond of being always on the go in society. He gave her a pill containing a small quantity of tellurium, and her breath was affected by it to such an extent she was not able to appear in public for a month. She never guessed what the trouble was. The volatilized essential oil of roses is supposed to cause "rose cold." This peculiar complaint is so far nervous in its character that paper roses somewhat excite it.

Broadened Freedoms Path Way.
What our fathers did they did not only for themselves, but for all who speak the English tongue. The lessons taught by our struggle and victories are as lasting as our race and broader than the vast territory we cover today. When, therefore, we celebrate the Declaration of Independence we celebrate not only the courage and conduct of ancestors whose descendants we are, but the brave and far sighted deed of servants of mankind who not only founded an empire, but broadened the pathway of civilization, progress and freedom around the world.—Thomas B. Reed.

Celebrating the Fourth.
One of the men who signed the Declaration of Independence is said to have expressed the desire that he might rise from his grave a hundred years later to witness the manner in which posterity observed the Fourth of July. If his wish could have been gratified, the venerable patriot would have found a decided change in the manner of the celebration, but none in the feeling which inspired it. Posterity, too, would undoubtedly have turned the tables on him, eagerly questioning him in turn as to the celebrations in his day, but even without his aid his questions can be answered.—Exchange.

THE NATIONAL BIRTHDAY
JULY 2 WAS THE DAY ON WHICH THE INDEPENDENCE RESOLUTION WAS ADOPTED.

On June 11 Jefferson of Virginia, Livingston of New York, Adams of Massachusetts, Franklin of Pennsylvania, and Sherman of Connecticut, were elected a Committee by the Continental Congress to draw up a formal declaration. Jefferson was elected Chairman. On July 1 Congress, in committee of the whole, took up Lee's resolutions for Independence, which had been introduced on June 7. The resolutions were reported favorably to the full house on July 2 by the vote of 9 yeas to 4. The same day the Congress concurred.

This day, July 2, seemed to the patriots assembled in Philadelphia the most memorable in history. They fully believed that future generations would celebrate July 2 as Independence Day. John Adams wrote to his wife: "The 24 day of July, 1776, will be the most memorable epoch in the history of America, to be celebrated by succeeding generations as the great anniversary festival, commemorated as the day of deliverance by solemn acts of devotion to God Almighty from one end of the continent to the other, from this time for evermore. I am well aware of the toil and blood and treasure it will cost us to maintain this declaration. Yet through all the gloom I can see the rays of light and glory; that posterity will triumph in that day's transaction."
By one of those curious anomalies of which history is full the 4th of July and not the 2d is celebrated as the nation's birthday.—N. Y. Press.

What it will do for you for a monthly payment of $8 per $1,000—80 of which applies on principal, 80 is interest.
First—It will buy for you any house desired or build you a house according to your own plan, for a payment of not less than 10% down.
Second—It will assume any mortgage on your property, and advance you more money, if desired, not to exceed 90% of its value. At above rates you would own your property free and clear in just 300 months; you can pay as much more as you wish, and reduce the time in proportion, or the full amount will be received at any time.
The first proposition enables you to convert your rent money into the ownership of a home.
The second proposition enables you to reduce the interest rate on your mortgage and at the same time be paying off the principal each month.

NOTICE OF ELECTION.
To the qualified voters of the Borough of Milford Take Notice, that the Town Council of said Borough has by its vote signified a desire to make an increase of indebtedness of said Borough, as provided under the Act of Assembly approved 9th June, 1898, entitled an Act to regulate the manner of increasing the indebtedness of municipalities, etc.

There will be an election held at the Court House, the place for holding municipal elections in said Borough of Milford, County of Pike, and State of Pennsylvania, on the ELEVENTH DAY OF JULY, A. D. 1898 between the hours of 9 P. M. and 7 P. M. of said day, to increase or not to increase the indebtedness of said Borough the sum of three thousand and five hundred dollars ($3500) above one hundred and five ($105) dollars indebtedness. Said increase is to be raised upon the last assessed valuation of said Borough of one hundred and eighty one ($181) dollars as a percentage of 0.2222 on the assessed valuation. The purpose for which the indebtedness is to be increased is purchasing which is known as the "Debt," and containing in the last the words "No Increase of Debt," or "Debt may be increased."
Approved this 6th day of June, A. D. 1898.
