DEMOCRATIC STATE TICKET.

THOSE Democrats who fondly hoped their State Convention would grasp the situation and have the political sagacity to take full advantage of the internal dissensions of their political opponents, will be disappointed.

A PERNICIOUS HABIT.
THERE have been a number of instances recently of fast driving on our streets. The offenders seem to be mainly from out of town.

The practice is especially dangerous on village streets in the evening and is at all times so on much traveled roads, and highways, and there is no excuse whatever for it.

Loss of the Maine.
The German Naval Commander Gerekc publishes in the current number of the official Marine Rundschau an extremely interesting article on the loss of the 'Maine.' He comes to the following conclusion: 'It is difficult, if not impossible, to give a definite answer to the question as to what the cause of the explosion on board the Maine may have been.'

As to the changes suggested by this gentleman in regard to the strengthening of ships' bottoms, we cannot think that any strengthening within reasonable limits would protect a ship from the effect of the explosion of such a mine as, in all probability, has been the cause of the destruction of the 'Maine' and the loss of some two hundred and fifty gallant men.—Industries and Iron, of London.

An Ungrateful Cad.
'Yes,' said a young man about town, 'there are a number of fellows in good society who never think of making any return for the entertainment given them by their girl friends. You see, they don't have to. They are in demand because nice society fellows are so decidedly scarce. A girl has to cudgel her brains to think up enough nice fellows to fill out an evening party. That's right.'

'I know one young fellow who has been the guest of a certain Cleveland girl a great many times—tea and parties and dinners and all that sort of thing. And one day I jokingly said to him, 'Things seem to be getting a little confidential for you at Miss Blank's.' What do you suppose he answered? 'Nonsense,' he said. 'You have no cause to say so. I never took her anywhere.'

Sheep For Family Use.
Every farmer should have a small flock of sheep to furnish him a supply of fresh meat, if no other purpose. The sheep is not much more trouble to kill and dress than a chicken. Its flesh is as wholesome as beef. Almost any farmers family can dispose of a mutton while it is fresh.

The Game at Monte Carlo.
If Monte Carlo is making millions it is not due to loaded roulette or double zeros or prepared cards. Every player has as much chance to win as the Banker, and the reason the individual does not get as wealthy as the Bank would willingly let him is because he returns again and again to the table until every cent is gone.

The success is also partly due to the fact that the owners of the casino do not play in person against the gamblers. If on their side the gamblers wanted to do the same as the company and engage agents to play for them the chances would then be equal.

Remember, these bankers or crochiers do not receive one franc more if they win, neither is a franc deducted if they lose. Their salary is an established and unvarying affair. Therefore they are indifferent. That indifference breeds coolness, does away with all feverish excitement. If anyone tries to break the bank, they do not oppose; if he succeeds, they send calmly to the office for new funds.

These crochiers play like intelligent machines, and they win in the long run, as that kind of man always does, over the impetuous and excited. The individual gets crazy with success or melancholy over loss. He tries every combination that is suggested to him by friend or stranger, listens to all advice, gets mixed up, and plays like a fool.—Philadelphia Press.

Mollie's Resignation.
'Yes,' declared Mollie Cranshaw, 'I have made up my mind to go to war if my husband must go. I shall be a nurse. It will be no worse for me than for him and I would much rather endure the hardships of camp life than suffer the anxiety that I should not be able to escape if he were at the front and I were left at home.'

As the sweet little woman finished speaking there came a blood curdling yell from the direction of the kitchen, and Mrs. Cranshaw turned pale. What if those awful Spaniards had—

But just then the cook tore madly through the dining room, yelling: 'Oh, murder, murder! I'm killed!'

Mollie Cranshaw took one look at the half severed thumb which the cook was waving at her and then there was a thud.

When the doctor succeeded in getting the lady restored to consciousness, she feebly asked: 'Where am I? what has happened?'

'The cook nearly cut off one of her thumbs with the butcher knife,' said her husband—'and you fainted!'

'Alfred,' said Mollie Cranshaw afterward, 'you will not think I don't love you just as dearly as I ever did if I tell you that I guess I shall not go as a nurse after all, will you?'

Our Hopes on Thee.

As, when the weary traveler gains, The height of some commanding hill, His heart revives, if o'er the plains He sees his home, though distant still.

Thus, when the Christian pilgrim views By faith his nation in the skies, The sight his fainting strength renews.

And wins his speed to win the prize, The thought of heaven his spirit cheers No more he grieves for troubles past, Nor any future trial fears, So he may safe arrive at last.

Jesus, on Thee our hopes we stay To lead us on to Thine abode, Assured Thy love will far o'erpay The hardest labors of our day.—Anonymous.

True worth is in being, not seeing— In doing, each day that goes by. Some little good—not in the dreaming.

Of great things to do by and by, For whatever men say in blindness, And in spite of the fancies of youth, There's nothing so kingly as kindness, And nothing so royal as truth.—Alice Caroy.
