During the last twenty years or prominent Democratic leader in Ohio who has not felt the results of John R. McLean's antagonism, either personally or through his followers and admirers of such Democrats as Thurman and Pendleton are not likely to be at this time harboring any too friendly feeling toward the man who in years past betrayed their principals.

What does the voter think who one year hears a man make a speech that the destruction of protection is the only nelp of permanent prosperity; the next year he hears the same orator tell soberly that the destruction of a system of 100-cent dollars and the adoption of free silver is the only hope of permanent prosperity, and the next year the

Gen. Otis is showing, by unusual ectivity, that he doesn't intend to wait either for the reinforcements for his army, the additional warships ordered to Philippine waters, on the advice of Admiral Dewey, or the close of the rainy season, to begin the work of crushing out the the Filipino rebeliion. The military movements over there during the last two or three days were a part of the general plan fully known and approved at the war department, but the secret was so well kept that press dispatches from Manila annonncing them were very agreeable surprises to the public. There will be some very agreeable surprises to to the public sent fron Manila in the near future, but no hint on their nature can be given at this time without violating confidence.

While Admiral Dewey is an extremely modest man, he has no mock modesty. Having decided to sceept the home for which money has been donated, he told the committee in charge of the fund, that he preferred they should buy a house, and furnish it complete, so that he could just walk in and hang us his hat, because he would like to utilize it this winter, in entertaining his friends; he also gave the committee very explicit directions as to where he wished the house to be located. Before leaving Washington for New England, Admiral Dewey accepted an invitation to go to Atlanta, Ga., about Nov. 1st, and re-engaged quarters at the family hotel in which he lived when last in the city, which he will occupy when he returns, until the committee buys him a house. The Admiral expects to be in Washington when President McKinley returns, which is likely to be about the 20th inst.

Nebraskans who who have been in Washington recently appear to feel certain that the State will go Republican this year, notwithstanding Mr. Bryan's extraordinary efforts to prevent it. One of them-Mr. W. R. THE BOUNCING BOY;

Amazing Story of a Lad in a Paeumatic Suit Told By a Traveler. I was stopping at the worst hotel in Dubuque, and you can't know what that means unless you've been there. After dinner, as was my wont, I went out to get something to eat, and at the restaurant my vis-a-vis was a queer looking little man with a patriarchal beard, honest-looking eyes, one of them green and the other bine, and an expression of the most childlike innocence. I am not averse to talking with strangers, and we soon fell into conver-sation. When he heard that I was sation. When he heard that I was from the metropolis, he said: "New York? I had more fun in that

"New York? I had more tun in that town one afternoon than you could shake a stick at."
"Do you mind telling me what you did?" I asked, scenting a story.
"Mind telling you? Why, you couldn't stop me; honest, you couldn't." He tucked his napkin under his chin, ited his heard behind his next to keen it out.

tucked his napkin under his chin, tied his heard behind his neck to keep it out of the soup, and hegan:

"Five years ago I was living in New York. I've lived three months in every state in the Union, taking 'em in turn, and it was New York's turn to have me. That's how I came to be there. Now, I've never cared for children as children, but I've often thought that there were possibilities inid up in a boy that to a person with an inventive turn of mind and no compunctions might yield good results. I had just invented a pneumatic suit and I wanted a boy to try it on. I went to an orphan asylum and picked out a boy. I asked for one extraordinarily light framed and with small bones and I got him. He weighed 40 pounds and he was 10 years old. I took him to my lodging and began to reduce his weight." "How did you do it?" I asked. "How would any one do it. I starved him. I fed him just enough each day to give him strength to get about and that was all. In six weeks he weighed fifteen pounds and was ready for my purpose. He was a smart lad, but very good natured. purpose. He was a smart lad, but very good natured. He'd let me do any-thing to him without complaining. He thing to him without complaining. He seemed to be grateful to me for giving him enough to keep him alive; said some men would have starved him outright. I was giad to see he was not an ingrate, and I really liked him as well as I can like anybody but myself. Well, when he was so light that I could lift him up with my little finger, I dreased him up in the pneumatic suit. It was made in such a way that it could be inflated with gas, and Billy—that was the Boy's name—would then look about inflated with gas, and Billy—that was the Boy's name—would then look about as well developed as any boy of 10. He didn't look fat at all. Then over the rubber suit I put a light cloth eait, and we filled the inner one with gas, and there we were. Well, sir, when he was inflated it was all he could do to keep his toes on the ground. He went swaying round like a balloon when it's being filled and I held tight on his hand the own space opposite the Fifth Avenue Hotel would be the best place to show him off. On the way down I told him what he was to do, and he seemed him what he was to do, and he seemed to enjoy the prospect. Poor fellow. He didn't know what was in store for him. But neither did I, so I don't care. I left him in the crowd and started to walk across Fifth avenue and Broadway to Madison Square. Of course a policeman yelled to me to keep back, but I kept on. Then Billy ran up behind me, and tried to pick my pocket. I turned and caught him in the act, and taking him by the nape of the neck I hurled him up in the air.

"The cops all stood still and the crowd forgot to breathe. He came down like a bit of thistle down and I landed a ktck in the middle of his back that sent him over to the Worth monument. He laughed as if it were great fun.

I'll teach you. Billy grinned, and to the great joy of everybody he jumped off the roof of the hotel and started down. But a storm had been brewing over toward Long Island and now there came a mights gust of wind that caught poor Billy and blew him seaward. I never saw him again, for I took an afternoon train for Pennsylvania, which was my next state. But I'll bet that New York crowd never forgot the fun I had with little orphan Billy. I've often won-dered what became of him." My friend beamed expansively at his fish, which had just been brought in.

and I went out and pondered on the example of Ananias.

Could Skate on His Head. "The recent death of Romanioff, the Russian skater and the old-time cham-pion, reminds me," said an old resident to the Washington Star, "of the fact that he gave exhibitions of his skating in this city over thirty-five years ago He was not only a fast skater, but h was specially skiliful in all kinds o fancy and trick skating surpassing in his grotesque skating any of the rolle akaters seen on the stage. The par-ticular exhibition which I remember, and which I was present, took place on the ice which had formed in the foundation of the Luther Memorial Church, on Fourteenth street.

"Romanioff gave his exhibition to some of his friends, who had been in-vited to see him by Mr. Bodisco, long the Russian Minister at Washington. He was the only skater I ever saw who could skate on his head. He had a fur cap on his head, on which a skate was attached. He would turn a handspring from his feet and land on his head, and skate away upside down. He also did a trick with skates on his hands and feet in which he represented a bear skating on all fours. The foura bear skating on all fours. The foun-dation of the church afforded a skating place seventy-five feet by about forty, which was sufficient for him to do his work, the audience standing on the foundation walls."
