DISPENSING BEER.

Amount Allowed to Brewery Employes.

The amount of beer consumed by men who work in breweries is little short of appailing, a hundred glasses a day not being considered unusual in one of the breweries uptown there is quite a system in dispensing drinks to the employes. Every man is graded according to his capacity, and tickets are issued to the men when they come to work in the morning. Each ticket is good for a glass of beer. they come to work in the morning. Each ticket is good for a glass of beer. Some men get a hundred, others 80 some 60, and so on down to the novices, who are only allowed 25 until their capacity is accurately judged through the system of graduation. The brewers claim that no drunkenness results from this, as the men perspire freely in the hot atmosphere, and the liquid has little effect upon them. If by some mischance a man should become incapacitated for work, he is demoted to the next lower class, and this is looked upon as a keen disgrace, and very rarely happens. "Of course, it ultimately leads to cirrhoris of the liver," said a prominent brewer reently, "but the men are bound to drink beer, and it is better to have a system. It saps their vitality to such an extent that they become easy victims to any disease. We lost two workmen last month from broken legs. To an ordinary man no importance would be attached to a fractured limb, but these fellows never railied. They just keeled over and died."—Phil. Record.
