We offer a line of new Spring Goods,

.....UNSURPASSED AND COMPLETE.....

Our point is that you need not go away from home to supply all your needs, or to secure bargains. We expect to satisfy you in both particulars.

DRY GOODS, new and stylish. GROCERIES, fresh and good. HARDWARE, BOOTS, SHOES, and CLOTHING. Any thing in any line at bottom prices.

To accomplish this end we have adopted a new system. All our prices are fixed on a basis of cash payment. This obviates the necessity to allow a margin for bad debts and interest. To accommodate responsible parties we cheerfully open monthly accounts, and expect prompt payment monthly, as our prices will not enable us to carry accounts longer.

Statements rendered the first of every month, and if paid within three days from date of bill, a cash discount of 2% is allowed. The same discounts given on all cash purchases exceeding $1.00. Goods sent out will be C. O. D. unless otherwise previously arranged.

AMENDMENT TO THE CONSTITUTION PROPOSED TO THE CITIZENS OF THIS COMMONWEALTH FOR THEIR APPROVAL OR REJECTION BY THE GENERAL ASSEMBLY OF THE COMMONWEALTH OF PENNSYLVANIA, PUBLISHED BY ORDER OF THE SECRETARY OF THE COMMONWEALTH IN PURSUANCE OF ARTICLE XVII OF THE CONSTITUTION.

A JOINT RESOLUTION

Proposing an amendment to the Constitution of the Commonwealth.

Section 1. Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania in General Assembly met, That the following be proposed as amendments to the Constitution of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania, in accordance with the provisions of the eighteenth article thereof: Amendment One to Article Eight, Section One.

At the end of the first paragraph of said section, after the words "shall be entitled to vote at all elections," there shall be inserted the following words: "subject however to such laws requiring and regulating the registration of electors as the General Assembly may enact." Section 2. Qualifications of Electors. Every male citizen twenty-one years of age, possessing the following qualifications, shall be entitled to vote at all elections, subject however to such laws requiring and regulating the registration of electors as the General Assembly may enact:

He shall have been a citizen of the United States at least one year immediately preceding the election.

He shall have resided in the State one year or if, having previously been a qualified elector, he shall have resided therein for at least six months, immediately preceding the election.

He shall have resided in the election district where he shall offer to vote at least two months immediately preceding the election.

It twenty-two years of age and upwards, he shall have paid within two years a State or county tax, or a tax of at least one cent, or a tax of at least two months and paid at least one month before the election.

Amendment Eleven to Article Eight, Section Seven.

Strike out said section the words "but no elector shall be deprived of the privilege of voting by reason of his name not being registered," and add in lieu thereof the following words: "but laws regulating and requiring the registration of electors may be enacted to apply to cities only, provided that such laws be uniform for cities of the same class," so that the said section shall read as follows:

Section 7. Uniformity of Election Laws.—All laws regulating the holding of elections by the citizens or for the registration of electors shall be uniform throughout the State, but laws regulating and requiring the registration of electors may be enacted to apply to cities only, provided that such laws be uniform for cities of the same class.

TIED MOTHERS.

A little elbow leans upon your knee,
Your tired knees, that has so much to bear,
A child's dear eyes are looking lovingly
From underneath a thatch of tangled hair.
Perhaps you do not heed the velvet touch
Of warm, moist fingers, folding yours
around his neck,
You do not prize this blessing over-much;
You almost are too tired to pray to-night.

But it is blessedness! A year ago
I did not see it as I do to-day—
We are so dull and thankless and too slow
To catch the sunshine till it slips away.
And now it seems surpassing strange to me
That, while I wore the badge of motherhood,
I did not kiss more oft and tenderly
The little child that brought me only good.

And if some night, when you sit down to rest,
You miss the elbow from your tired knee,
This restless, curling head from your breast,
This hapling tongue that clatters contentedly;
If from your own dimpled hands had slipped,
And ne'er would nestle in your palm again;
If the white feet into their grave had tripped,
I could not blame you for your heartache then!

I wonder so that mothers ever fret
At little children clinging to their gown,
Or that the footprints, when the days are wet,
Are ever black enough to make them sore.

If I could kiss a rosy, restless foot,
And hear a patter in my home once more,
If I could mend a broken cart to-day,
To-morrow make a kite to reach the sky—
There is no woman in God's world could say
She was more blissfully content than I.

But ah! the dainty pillow next my own
Is never ruffled by a shining head;
My stinging birdling from its nest has flown,
The little boy I used to kiss is dead!

THE MISSIONARY BLOCK.

"O, mamma," exclaimed Ruth Fenton as she came bounding into the house upon a crisp autumn day, "we have thought of just the nicest way of helping you big people fit up that box to send out West."

"I'm all attention," And Mrs. Fenton smiled encouragingly into the rosy face before her.

"Well, and, dropping upon a stool at her mother's feet, Ruth continued, "you see, in the first place, we're going to make a quilt, and as grandma would say, it's to be a very fine quilt and a curious quilt."

"Indeed!" laughed Uncle Jack, much amused at his niece's enthusiasm. "Yes, sir; for there are to be some very fine blocks and some curious blocks, because in the middle of each one and upon the four sides are to be plain white patches, and on each one of these a name is to be written; and every one whose autograph appears upon our quilt is to pay ten cents for the honor."

"Why?" cried her brother Bob. "You are too kind. I must beg to be excused."

"Don't flatter yourself, sir," returned his sister, merrily. "Do you suppose I would send a poor, hard-working missionary any of your handwritings to ruin his eyes upon?"

"There wouldn't be any room for you anyway; for, of course, my own name must go in the middle, and then there will be papa's, mamma's and Uncle Will's for three more places, and I'm going to ask my old gentleman to write in the last one."

"My, what a privilege he'll think it is to part with ten cents for the sake of having his name go down to posterity in that shape! I don't believe he ever gave away a penny in his life!"

"I am sure it is a very kind of him to offer me the flowers," returned Ruth, warmly; "and I shall tell him that he need not give me his name if he does not wish to."

"I think your idea a very good one," here interposed Mrs. Fenton. "It seems as though he must sometimes be very lonely, even if he does prefer to live alone."

Devoting herself to her sewing, Ruth soon completed her block; and the following morning, after the others had written their names upon it, she started out briskly in the direction of Raymond Page's cottage, where she was situated upon the outskirts of the town.

Her heart beat somewhat faster as, drawing near, she discovered the one she sought in his front yard, busily engaged in covering an tiny some of his rosebushes for the winter.

He did not seem to see her at first, and it gave her a great start when she suddenly faced around and said, "In sorry I haven't my roses for you to-day, Miss; but perhaps we can find something that you will think worth carrying away."

"O, sir," stammered Ruth, with a brightening color, "I—I should like the flowers very much; but I came to ask another kind favor to-day."

"Ah! that's good, that's good," he repeated, his bright eyes looking out questioning from under his bushy eyebrows. "But, you see, I don't know that I had anything but flowers that a little maid like you would fancy."

Ruth thought of what Bob had said; but, producing her patchwork and plunging boldly into the subject, she had soon made the matter clear to her attentive auditor.

"Millions will be spent in politics this year. We can't keep the campaign going without money any more than we can keep the body vigorous without food. Dyspeptics used to starve themselves. Now kodol dyspepsia cures dyspepsia what you eat and allows you to eat all the good food you want. It radically cures stomach troubles.

"Humph!" he granted, as she finally concluded her explanation. "What made you think I'd help? Despite his sober face, there was a twinkle in his eyes which helped Ruth to say: "Why, sir, it seemed to please you to give me the roses. So I thought you might be glad to do something for someone else."

"Wise little woman," he responded; and now the twinkle broadened into a smile. "We'll go into the house and see if we can find a pen."

A pencil will do just as well, sir, as the names are all to be written over with indelible ink. And, handing him the book and pencil which she carried, Ruth waited with a pleased smile while he, resting the book against a tree, rather laboriously wrote his name.

"There," he said at last, "I guess they can read it; but I reckon the missionary won't be awake nights thinking about it if he can't quite make it out."

"Now let me see," he added merrily; "there's something else for me to do." And Ruth's eyes danced merrily at the lines of perplexity upon his forehead.

"Oh, yes," he added; and, slowly drawing from his pocket a fat wallet, he took from it two silver pieces, saying, "Here is ten cents for the name and a dollar for your visit."

"Really?" ejaculated Ruth.

"Yes, really," he returned, much amused at her evident astonishment.

She could hardly wait for the bright bunch of autumn flowers which he then gathered for her and, when she had thanked him warmly, and promised to come again, it was with no lagging feet that she made her way homeward.

Many hands make light work; and it was not long before the quilt was finished, and sent with the box full of other good things to the far Western home.

About a week later Ruth was one day surprised to receive a letter addressed in an unfamiliar hand, and bearing the post-mark of the little Western town. Hastily opening it, she read aloud as follows:

Dear Miss Fenton—How much I wish to thank you for your share in the pleasant surprise which has come to us, and which will add so much to our comfort and happiness during the coming winter! I have already addressed a letter to your society, and I am writing you now especially in behalf of others whom I would gladly benefit. Upon the block of the autograph quilt, which bore your name and address was the name of one Raymond Page. Can you find out if he came to this country when about fifteen years old, leaving behind him in England an only sister, Hannah?

The latter married, and coming to America, finally drifted to this western town, where her husband died about two years ago, leaving her and an invalid daughter with scarcely anything to live upon. She was very much excited to-day upon catching sight of the name upon your quilt, as she had for many years lost sight of her brother and feared that he was dead. Will you please write me promptly that Mrs. Bell's anxiety may be relieved as soon as possible?

My husband and children join me in loving thanks and earnest wishes that God will bless you richly in your efforts to help others. Very cordially yours,
Annie Tremaine.

"O mother, isn't it just like a story! What will Mr. Page say?" And donning her wraps as quickly as possible Ruth was soon on her way to the cottage.

"Sakes alive!" exclaimed its owner a quarter of an hour later, when opening his door, he discovered Ruth upon the steps.

Almost breathless from rapid walking and excitement she gasped: "O, Mr. Page, did you ever have a sister Hannah?"

An eager, questioning look quickly replaced the half quizzical expression upon his face.

"Yes, yes," he returned. And as quickly as possible Ruth told him all that she knew.

"Poor Hannah! poor girl!" he murmured at last, brushing the back of his hand across his eyes. "I must go after her right away. O, Miss, you don't know how it seems to find that there is some one in the world really belonging to me!"

That night he started for the far West, and in two weeks was at home again, having brought with him the long lost sister and his niece.

The latter interested Ruth exceedingly. She was so patient and sweet, despite her lameness and the pain which often caused her such distress.

The cottage became one of Ruth's pleasant visiting places, as she enthusiastically said, "I don't believe there is another such happy family in town."—Every other Sunday.

In Rag Time Attire.

"For heaven's sake, tell that new servant of yours to get a new dress before she comes here to-morrow. She is positively too slovenly to come in to the dining-room."

This "heavy" was dealt with by a suburbanite to his wife the other morning. She informed the negress of the desire of the master of the house, but that gentleman had no idea his instructions would be so well carried out.

When the breakfast was brought in the following morning what was his surprise to behold the negress togged out in a magnificent evening dress, with sparklers in her hair and other adornments on her bare arms and neck.

"What's all this," he cried. "Have you fired that other girl, and got an Egyptian princess in her place?"

"No, boss," said the nigger girl, speaking for herself. "I do do same nigger, but I jes put on mah rag-time clothes, as you was so particular 'bout mah personal 'pearance.'—Memphis Semitar.
