Chronicles of the KAH-PEE-KOG CLUB

By Wright A. Patterson.

NOTE—The Kah-pee-kog club is an interesting organization of wood choppers and general laborers, in the Adirondack region of the State. It is a very old organization, and its members are to be found in all parts of the State. The club is a very interesting one, and its members are to be found in all parts of the State. The club is a very interesting one, and its members are to be found in all parts of the State.

MANY things the many men to the Canadian wilds. Ask a dozen different people that you meet in the Muskoka and Georgian Bay districts what they came for, and you will get a dozen different answers. But there are more than a dozen different reasons why men go to these wilds. The massive, dense, silent forest, with its great pine and hemlock trees towering heavenward, its tangled underbrush and fleet-footed deer attract many; its placid lakes, with their shore lines of rugged granite, and the islands that shoot out of the water as though thrown up by a strong hand, as they were, attract others; the fish, the canoeing and the silent grandeur of untrammeled nature attract still more.

All of these I like, but there is still another attraction that appeals strongly to me. That is the honest, fearless guides, veritable children of nature, and the stories they tell. For us at Kah-pee-kog Frazier had a new story. He knew the woods and the lakes and the myths thereof; even more he loved them and deemed it a pleasure to tell of them. As for us, well, even Smith would stop barping on that ten-pound bass he was going to catch, to listen, or Ulmark would forget for a time the big one he had caught.

A forest fire, even in its incipient stages, is a thing to be remembered. When a spark that has perhaps been smoldering in the moss and underbrush for hours first breaks out into flame, it seems but a small thing, and scarcely worth one's attention. This is the way we looked at it when first we saw the flames shoot up the trunk of a giant pine, but Frazier knew better; he knew there was danger in that flame, a danger that menaced thousands of acres of valuable timber, and under his direction, we hustled across the water to the main land in the vicinity of the blaze in a futile effort, the fire seemed everywhere, and as fast as we beat and drowned it out at one spot it would break out at another. Finally we gave it up, trusting that the clouds hanging overhead would bring the only possible relief for the massive pines.

Already the fire had gained such headway as to make a longer occupancy of the mainland in the vicinity of the blaze impossible with comfort, so we climbed back into our canoes and pushed out into the water a ways to watch it. For some time Frazier sat without saying a word, and we rather wondered at his silence, for surely the fire recalled some history of the forest as he knew it.

"It must 'a been 40 years ago," began Frazier. "I'm so sure next winter, when it was 'bout 12 or less then, when th' lumberin' camp on th' Ottawa burned out in a fire like to this one. Pap was workin' fer Jim Clark on th' Ottawa then, an' had tuk me along in th' fall in th' hopes o' gittin' a job fer me, too. He got th' job all right, an' I begin my lumberin' career that year; a lumberin' career that's ago'n' to end only when old Gabe comes a-blowin' his horn fer me. When I went there it was the best lumberin' district I ever see. Th' pines were monsters, bigger'n any 'round here, an' the big ones were twice as thick as they are here. Course they wasn't no such a demand fer lumber as there is now, an' th' market was further away, but Jim Clark was a smart one, an' he made a good deal o' money when the fire came an' burned an' him both clean out. Took all o' his lumber an' camp fixin's an' my pap.

"Th' Injuns was pretty thick along th' Ottawa in them days, an' they wasn't allus th' best disposed Injuns at that. Long in th' fall we lost some men that th' Injuns killed out in th' woods, but then they allus had made trouble fer themselves, an' was forever takin' a whack at an Injun whenever they see one, an' it was jist sort o' evenin' things up a bit when th' Injuns got 'em. But them kind o' things couldn't go on allus without bringin' a general mix-up, an' it came when a pack o' Injuns made a rush on th' camp one day. I tell ye there was a hot an' lively time for a few minutes. Bullets was a-flyin' all ways to meet, but th' lumber jacks wasn't gittin' any th' worst o' it, cause they wuz in the cabin, an' had th' logs atween them an' th' Injuns. But there wuz a lot o' th' Injuns went down afore they give it up as a bad job an' pulled stakes fer home.

"After that everything went along 'bout right 'till long in th' winter. We begin to think we wuz clean clear o' th' Injuns, 'cause they had moved off north to th' trading posts o' th' Hudson's Bay company, an' we never see none o' them at all. Clark kept his men workin' early an' late, an' they wuz a-pilin' up timber at a great rate. Must 'a been 10,000,000 feet o' logs a-bayin' 'round ready fer th' sleds to pull to th' river, where they'd wait fer th' break-up in th' spring, an' I know Clark wuz a-countin' th' dollars he wuz a-goin' to make on that winter's work an' it wuz no small job-a-countin' 'em neither. An' th' lumber jacks wuz a-countin' th' dollars they wuz to get when the spring pay day come jist as much as Clark wuz a-countin' his profits. They used to agust 'round the fire place in th' sleepin' cabin, an' tell what they'd do when they got back to th' towns, an' th' fun they wuz a-goin' to have when each th' logs got down th' river.

"It wuz a-durin' one o' these discussions, as you might say, that some body said he smelled fire.

"Course you do," said Pap, 'what's that in front o' you?"

"But th' feller said it wasn't that 'n' he went outside to see. Pretty soon he come back, an' said things wuz

PIONEERS TO BE HONORED,

Early Settlers of Oregon Are Soon to Have an Attractive Monument.

It has been decided by the pioneer monument committee of the Society of Oregon Native Sons, with the concurrence of the Oregon Native Daughters, to hold in Portland next year a grand celebration to last a week or ten days. While the plans are not fully matured, the consensus of opinion among business men, as expressed by many of them, is that it will be more satisfactory to have it take the place of the annual exposition; that we should make it a state affair—an exhibition of the wonderful improvements in manufacturing appliances and machinery in the nearly three score years of our governmental existence and offer every encouragement to the people to bring in the historical relics they have laid away, and the Portland Oregonians.

Besides the attractiveness of such a feature it will give our historical society an opportunity to augment its already valuable collection. The Native Sons and Native Daughters are historical societies, their common object being to see that the history of the early days of the land of "intemperate woods" is duly recorded. The purpose of this celebration is to raise money to build a monument to the pioneers. It is proposed to erect in Portland a memorial building on one of the Park row blocks which can be used as a museum for pioneer relics a meeting place for the pioneers. In this way the best and longest "warrior tellers" in Maine are desired to entertain the club. The idea is to give prizes for the longest and best original story. The rules will allow a storyteller all the time he may ask for the telling of the story, to be continuous, with time out for meals.

GAMBLING FOR OFFICES.

Religious People of London Scandalized by a Recent Occurrence in Politics.

Some of the ultra religious people here are expressing astonishment that a tie in the vote for member of the borough council was decided the other day by tossing a penny, says a London paper. They insist that the element of chance ought to have been eliminated from English politics long ago. As a matter of fact, there is still a corner left in the British constitution for King, Chance, to build his throne in, and it is not many years since the house of commons deliberately sanctioned the appeal to chance in certain emergencies. When city councils were being established in Scotland the question arose in parliament as to the choice of a chairman of the joint committee in case of an equality of votes, and it was proposed that the final decision in that case be taken by lot. Serious members objected to such a frivolous method of deciding an important matter, but the mover of the resolution reminded the house of the apostolic precedent, and it was decided by a majority that what was good enough for the election of a successor to Judas Iscariot was good enough for the chairman of a joint committee. So that the Chamberwell election is likely to stand in law.

STORY TELLERS ORGANIZE.

They Will Receive Protection and Encouragement Down in Maine.

Long-distance story tellers have had a new field opened to them here. At Waterville, Me., an organization has been formed with the purpose of bringing together the best and longest "warrior tellers" in Maine and award prizes. The meeting was held in the parlors of the Elmwood hotel, where, according to the rules, all the stories must be told. The official title of the organization is the "Storytellers' Association of Maine." The meetings of the association will be held whenever the president shall secure storytellers who desire to entertain the club. The idea is to give prizes for the longest and best original story. The rules will allow a storyteller all the time he may ask for the telling of the story, to be continuous, with time out for meals.

PICTURE COST A FORTUNE.

One of the Duke of Marlborough's Art Treasures Worth a King's Ransom.

The costliest picture in the world is owned by the duke of Marlborough, who has a large and very expensive collection of pictures which has come down to him from the original duke of Marlborough, says the St. Louis Globe-Democrat. The rarest of these is the "Blenheim Madonna," painted by Raphael in 1507 and now valued at $350,000. The picture was originally painted for the church of the Servi a Perugia. It is eight feet high, representing the madonna and child seated on a throne, with a figure of St. John the Baptist on the left and that of St. Nicholas of Bari on the right, the last two being life size. Its high value is due to the fact that it is one of the best preserved of the pictures of Raphael which are now in existence. It has been proposed that the British government buy this picture. Blenheim palace is recalled in honor of the battle which the English, under the duke of Marlborough, won over the French, and was given to the great soldier by Queen Anne. Every year a little flag worked with fleur-de-lis is sent to Windsor castle by way of rent and hung upon the walls of the castle.

Look for the Warning.

Heart disease kills suddenly, but never without warning. The warnings may be faint and brief, or may be startling and extend over many years, but they are none the less certain and positive. Too often the victim is deced by the thought, "it will pass away." Alas, it never passes away voluntarily. Once installed, heart disease never gets better of itself. If Dr. Miles' Heart Cure is used in the early stages recovery is absolutely certain in every case where its use is persisted in.

"For many years I was a great sufferer from heart disease, before I finally found relief. I was subject to fainting and sinking spells, fullness about the heart, and was unable to attend to my household duties. I tried nearly every remedy that was recommended to me and doctored with the leading physicians of this section but obtained no help until I began taking Dr. Miles' Heart Cure. It has done me more good than all the medicine I ever took."
