Remarkable Instance of the Last Century,

Apropos of the remarkable instance of conjugal devotion, which, according to the London Globe, has recently been displayed by Mr. Gaunon, of Cincin nati, in bringing his wife's body from America to her native place in this nati, in bringing his wife's body from America to her native place in this even more romantic story, which is recorded of Lord Dalmeny, eldest son of James, second earl of Rosebery. This young nobleman, who died in 1755 met in London some years previou a his death a lady, with whom he fell intently in love, and whom he per unded to marry him and accompany him on a continental tour. The mar riage, though concealed from the rel atives on both sides, proved to be an extremely happy one, the pair living logether in the greatest harmony until the lady was overtaken by a mortal illness. When assured that she was sex. My maiden name was C. Cannon and my last request is to be buries not appear, but Lord Dalmeny
