She wanted to buy, but the owner said her nay. He wanted the truct himself.

Just before the first McKinley election, however, the owner, being in need of money, told Mrs. Morey she might have the acres. And then it was the lady's turn to hesitate. She didn't know how the election was going, but she had a pretty clear idea that it would be bad for the business or the country If Bryan were elected. So she told the owner that if the election went McKinley's way she would buy the nine acres. If the gentleman from Nebraska was elected she wouldn't buy.
