The people like an outspoken man, and they hope the day has not gone by when such a man can be a regular Republican. In announcing his candi dacy Colonel Watros wished it particularly understood that he was a regufar Republican and no factionist. If ever there was a test of a man's pularity it was in that campaign in which Colonel Watres was elected lieutenant governor, when the party sandidate for governor was defeated. In the first place Colonel Watres ran that year against a man who was 'extremely popular; and secondly, every man who has ever cast a ballot knows that it is the most natural thing in politics for the candidate for lieutenant governor to go down with the can fidate for governor. The election of such a steadfast and honorable Republican as Lieutenant Governor Watres, therefore, in a campaign that resulted in the defeat of the party nominee for governor, is the best proof that he was in the mind of every Republican who cast a ballot at that slection, because the result involved same, if not actually necessary, at rouble. During the absence of Governor Stone in Maxico and Attorner General Elikin in Florida, gossip on "the Hill" is active with next years campilgn, and especially so with regard to the mandidates for governor. Those who are really anxious for political success contend that the homination of a strictly machine candidate who has been closely identified with the Ripper scheme, the trolley, grab, and other legislative intamics, will be disastrous if there was nothing ht attike but the governorehip alone; the party managers might be willing to take the chances of mominating some man who would be on the defonsive from the day of his nomination till election day; but with an much else at issue this would be a reckless and hazardous course. It is well known that the character of the candidate for governor will affect the chances of every other candidate. If the gubernatorial momines is some undestrable person whose close connection with the machine will sause him to be regarded with aversion or indifference by the cases of the voters, he will imperil not only the governorship, but the legitility of the gubernatorial forms the candidate for United States senatorship cannot, as in the case of the gubernatorial southers of the gubernatorial southers are also as the same of the gubernatorial southers are also as the same of the will depend for his success on the snecess of the party standard-heurer, and every senatoral and long party revolt in the state can be put with the candidate for law United States senatorship cannot, as in the case of the gubernatorial southers are also as the state will be affected for good or lill by the candidate for governor As illustration of this is seen in the result of the gubernatorial southers are also as the state will be affected for good or lill by the candidate for governor As illustration of this is seen in the result of the propole.
