PROTECTION OF GAME.

The state game commission has issued a circular calling attention to the importance of enforcing the game laws, and as well the laws protecting song and insectivorous birds, which contains some interesting facts relative to the benefit accruing to farmers from the destruction of insects wrought by birds. It also impresses the duty on the people of electing as constables men who will fearlessly assist in enforcing the laws. It is little use that people pay taxes to support a game commission and to protect game if constables are blind to infractions of the law. The commission with its limited means cannot cover the ground and it is for mutual interest that each community should endeavor to select for officers men who aid in this commendable work. If the law is wrong ask to have it repealed but do not elect men to office and then ask them to perjure themselves to shield a few offenders.

Associate Judges John C. Houck and Jacob Klaer, who retire from the bench Jan. 1, will carry with them into private life the respect and esteem of people generally for the courteous manner in which they have performed their duties, often difficult and delicate, requiring the exercise of tact and prudence. To the members of the bar they have uniformly been considerate and their manner always pleasant and cordial. They may well be content with the conduct of their duties during their incumbency.

Out in Pittsburg opposition is being organized to the regular republican ticket and it is proposed to make a warm fight at the February election for control of councils. The ripper has aroused a strong and vigorous element and it is probable there will be serious divisions in the party.

Barnum's Monkeys

The largest olive grove in the world is at San Francisco, Cal. Governor Leslie M. Shaw of Iowa will succeed Hon. Lyman D. Gage as secretary of the treasury.

Miss Etta Kipp spent a day this week with her friend, Bessie Allen, at the Allen House, Matamoras.

A fall of rock in the east end of Bergen tunnel caused a delay to trains of several hours last Saturday.

Mrs. Jennie Sherrer and Mrs. Paul N. Bourne attended the Swartwout-Howell wedding near Branchville, N. J., this week.

There is some talk of erecting a new county out of parts of Wayne, Lackawanna and Susquehanna, and Carbondale wants to be the county seat.

The Methodist people held their Christmas Wednesday evening in the church. There were recitations, music and responsive readings and a thoroughly enjoyable occasion.

The Presbyterian Sunday school had its distribution of gifts Wednesday night in the church. The exercises consisted of music and responsive readings from a program entitled "The Infant King." Afterwards refreshments were provided to which all the congregation was invited and which were generally appreciated.

Munroe's county commissioners have notified the Broadway street railway company to remove its tracks from the iron bridges crossing Broadheads and Potomac creeks. The reasons given are that the bridges are too small to accommodate vehicles, pedestrians and the cars, and not strong enough to carry them. The courts will probably have to settle the question.

THE CHURCH COLUMN

(By Rev. C. K. Scamper.) The topics for next Sabbath are, "Lessons from the Past?" "Ask now of the days that are past."—Deut. 4:30, and "Preparing for the Future?" "Reaching forth unto the things that are before."—Philippians 3:13.

The old year with its duties and opportunities will soon be among the things of the past. This is a time for retrospection. As we look back on the past year of our work in Milford there is much to cause us to rejoice. Our church has had a prosperous year, spiritually and financially. Not all has been accomplished that we wished, but on the whole we have reason to be glad for the past and have bright hopes for the future.

The union week of prayer will begin at the Methodist church on January 6th, Sabbath evening. Mr. Smeed will preach. These services will continue Monday and Tuesday evenings at the same place. On Tuesday evening Dr. J. B. Wright will be with us and preach. After the service we will hold our fourth quarterly conference. Special music will be rendered at this service by our male quartet. The coming of our presiding elder is always the assurance of a feast of good things. He is noted over his district as a deep, spiritually minded man, and he always gives us a thoughtful and helpful sermon. Come and hear him.

On the Monday night following the week of prayer we will begin the Bible readings that have been previously announced. We believe in study for every individual. Why not learn to study the Book of Book? One reason why so many differences have grown up between the believers in the Bible is that many have never learned how to find the truth in the Bible.

Correct principles of interpretation will save much trouble. For example, let us take the idea of God as a Spirit. Then it follows that they that worship Him must worship Him in Spirit. Since the law and the Gospel were given to bring man to God, it follows again that the important thing in both is the spirit, and not the letter. This is too often forgotten, and the result is a slavery to dead forms, a type of Phariseism, worse than that which Jesus denounced. The Bible readings will be open to any who wish to attend.

Our Christmas service last Wednesday night was largely attended and the presents were exceptionally fine. The music cabinet given to Mrs. Thomas Armstrong is a token of the regard of the church people for her services as organist. All went off nicely and we are happy in the thought that many others have been made happy also. It was very kind of our friends to remember the writer in such a substantial way. Cash is always acceptable, and especially is that true when given for the purpose of buying books. The check from Mr. James Pinchot deserves a personal word of thanks. The only reason why the other contributors are not mentioned by name is because I do not know who they are. I am in the peculiarly happy position therefore to be thankful to all of our people.

"All well—all happy—lots of fun". That is the regular report from the monkey cage of Barnum's Circus ever since the keepers began dosing the monkeys with Scott's Emulsion. Consumption was carrying off two thirds of them every year and the circus had to buy new ones.

One day a keeper accidentally broke a bottle of Scott's Emulsion near the monkey cage and the monkeys eagerly lapped it up from the floor. This suggested the idea that it might do them good. Since then the monkeys have received regular doses and the keeper reports very few deaths from consumption. Of course it is cheaper to buy Scott's Emulsion than new monkeys—and that suits the circus men.

Consumption in monkeys and in man is the same disease. If you have it or are threatened with it can you take the hint?

This picture represents the Trade Mark of Scott's Emulsion and is on the wrapper of every bottle. Sent for free sample. SCOTT & BOWNE, 409 Pearl St., New York 30c and $1. all druggists.

LADY BLANCHE.

"'Tis the dawn of an Autumn day, And all the world is still Save for the wave of the tree tops, And the creak on the mill.

The sun glows red on the valley— On golden sheaves of grain, And the black trees in the forest Glow like a western plain.

A river flows through that valley, Cool, fresh, and deep, And the waves roll on its surface When all the world's asleep.

Oh, cruel arm of the ocean, What tales you could tell If your tongue was but loosened As you flow through the dell.

But now you will tell a story That church bells fond have rung, And which has, oh, mighty river, Come from many a tongue.

'Twas late in the cool September, And winds were growing chill, When the squire and Blanche his daughter, Came to live on the hill.

The squire owned a quiet valley— Many a westeren ranch, But fatter than all his acres Was his fair daughter, Blanche.

She was good and kind, remember, Alike to rich and poor, And many the fruit and flowers She'd brought to cottage doors.

Lady Blanche the parson's called her, Well was the name, I trow, For none of the simple people Had looked on fatter brow.

And then she was fond of riding On horseback, proud and gay, So up and down in the valley She'd gallop every day.

But see the sky! How it darkens! Now comes the thunder's roar As the rain comes down in torrents And beats against the doors.

But in the storm a hand is laid Firmly upon a door, And a proud, sweet voice is saying, Amid the tempest's roar:

"My father, Blanche is a thing— To me a cousin dear— And to her bedside I must go, Though it be far or near."

But listen! the storm is ceasing! Farewell, for I must go, I'm going across the river— 'Tis I, your friend, I know."

"My daughter," the squire's voice trembled, "May peace be with you now," He laid his hands upon her head And kissed her troubled brow.

"Go then, my child," he continued, "Your husband is at the door, But do not fail to soon return— I love you more and more."

Blanche smiled and bowed her lovely head, Then rode o'er brake and fern, And little did she dream or think Of how she would return.

Riding toward the river's brink, She heard the waters roar, For now they had risen higher Than e'er they had before.

The river that flowed so calmly Was now a foaming flood, But Selim now stood as Brimly As he had always stood.

Blanche's brave heart almost failed her, But she said in clear tones, "We must ford the river, Selim, And do it all alone."

The noble creature arched his neck, And then his rider bore Into the raging, foaming flood— For the bridge was covered o'er.

Well now, well done, oh, noble pair— The flood is nearly crossed— A slip, a slide, a startled scream, Alas! now all is lost.

The treacherous waters closed above The face of Blanche so fair, And all was still after that scream Had rent the silent air.

Yes, Selim was drowned beneath The waters dark and deep, And the pale form of his rider Lay in a silent sleep.

The squire sat in a silent room— A top o' me at the door— A man in tears bade him "Make way— Your daughter is no more."

We saw her at the river bank That sloped so high and steep, She tried to cross and then she sank Beneath the waters deep.

We found her then and brought her here, Silent and cold and dead, She looks as though she were asleep Lying upon her bed.

My wife twined lilies in her hair, They grew on waters wide, But now she sleeps, she never will see The coming of the tide.

Now she is dead, we'll lay her here— She has died like a falling leaf— Leaving the room they left the squire Alone in his silent grief.

He knelt by the bed where she lay, His child who just before Made him goodbyes with tender words, Her hand upon the door.

He prayed to God with trembling lips, "I've nothing left to lose, Take me I pray thee, my Saviour, To thy kind home above."

'Tis the sea of sun, its waning rays Above through the churchyard gloom, They light the graves, the mellow rays, Gilding a marble tomb.

Two bodies rest beneath the sod, And flowers o'er their wave, Blanche and her father both are dead, And rest in the quiet grave.

The squire and Blanche lay side by side, They rest in silent sleep, The holy, peaceful sleep from which We never wake to weep. MARK.

The county commissioners let the building of a temporary bridge on the turnpike near the Hamilton place yesterday to George Gregory for the sum of $90. It will be 55 feet long and located a little farther up the stream.

Thinking of Gifts. Everybody's got their thinking caps on—pondering over the same old question: "What Shall I Give?" Be the prospective recipient a man or a woman, a boy or a girl there is nothing more likely to please him or her than a pair of slippers. We have an unusual assortment—unusual even here where the variety has always been greatest; and we promise you that the prices are just as usual. As low as we can make them. JOHNSON, Fitter of Feet.

Pains in the Back. Are symptoms of a weak, torpid or stagnant condition of the kidneys or liver, and are a warning it is extremely hazardous to neglect, so important is a healthy action of these organs. They are commonly attended by loss of energy, lack of courage, and sometimes by gloomy foreboding and despondency.

Hood's Sarsaparilla and Pills. Cure kidney and liver troubles, relieve the back, and build up the whole system.

THE RAMBLER'S PICKINGS. Lucky Christmas only comes once a year. If it came oftener it would be hard to take the swelling out of some heads.

Defacto: So the schoolmarms were unable to recognize the Rambler. Now I'll give you a pointer: If you see a crossed-eyed one rambling down the streets here, that's him.

Christmas was white but no sleighing. Leroy Kipp and Warren Chol attended the shooting match at Port Jervis. Warren did well but Roy couldn't hit the broad side of a barn.

When men is in, the wits are out; When women fight the hair flies. John Detrick's pet peddling horse is no more.

Now is the time to hunt up the memorandum of those good resolutions we forgot to keep last year. We will try to stick nearer to them after we write it, 1902.

On account of the Christmas tree festivity in the Presbyterian and M. E. churches Wednesday evening Prof. Dann's hop in Brown's hall was not very largely attended.

After New Year's is the time to begin talking politics. It is not far to the spring election, which is a good time to begin to fix broken down fences for the fall campaign.

Prof. Dann's class will give another hop in Brown's Hall on New Year's night.

Many of our readers here will remember S. P. Moser and his family who some years ago resided for a time in this town and will be pleased to learn that they are pleasantly located at Dowagiac, Mich. Mr. Moser is a prosperous druggist and his boys are all well established in business and thriving.
