

THE WASHINGTON LETTER.

"This is the close of the first year of the twentieth century and it seems to me appropriate that we should pause for a moment and look backward," said a member of the cabinet today. "Six years ago Mr. McKinley assumed the responsible duties of the presidency. He was confronted by a sadly depleted treasury as a result of democratic tariff tinkering; the prosperity of the country was waning from similar causes; a condition of things prevailed in Cuba which was abhorrent to all right thinking people. Without stopping to review the history of those six years look at the situation today.

"The treasury is bursting with a surplus aggregating $381,000,000 including the gold reserve, of which $221,000,000 is actually in gold coin or bullion. The country is enjoying a prosperity never before equalled. Affairs in Cuba are prosperous and she will soon be a free and independent sister republic. The United States has demonstrated her military prowess to an extent that has commanded the respect of the world and will make the Monroe doctrine easy of maintenance. We are the owners of a fair land in the antipodes which will in time become one of the most prosperous colonies. Civil government in the Philippines is being rapidly extended and with peace will come commercial prosperity such as never could have been hoped for under Spanish rule. Everything bids fair for the construction of the Isthmian canal which will add to the prosperity of our western states.

"Under these conditions it is folly to talk of politics in Mr. Roosevelt's selection of the members of his cabinet. The credit for what has been accomplished belongs to no one man but to the republican party to which the people have confided the welfare of the country. Every true republican realizes that and will lead every aid to the faithful and successful administration of those interests. Mr. Roosevelt is too noble an American, too good a republican to be thinking and scheming for the nomination in 1904 as the newspapers represent. He will select for his official advisers those men who are the best qualified to assist him and to administer the affairs of their respective departments. You may rest assured that the president's one aim is to give the country the best possible administration, irrespective of his own future although, of course, the people will recognize the integrity of his intentions and he will be the only possible candidate in 1904.

"All this talk about Senator Hanna's scheming to secure the nomination, and Senator Furaker's doing the same thing, and Governor Shaw's sacrificing his own presidential aspirations in accepting the treasury portfolio you can put down as pure nonsense. There is nothing in them but newspaper gossip. Mr. Roosevelt will be the next candidate of the republican party beyond the peradventure of a doubt and it is safe to predict even at this early day that he will be elected."

These statements are undoubtedly true but it is known that had it not been for the Buffalo tragedy Governor Shaw would have stood a fair chance of securing the nomination in 1904. He is a man of exceptional ability and has the happy faculty of making friends wherever he goes. He has been in Washington on several occasions during the past few years and all who have met him speak most favorably of him. He has long been a student of finance and has proven himself one of the most capable supporters of sound money in the country. He is not closely affiliated with Wall street and for that reason it will prove more difficult for his enemies to impugn his acts than was the case with Secretary Gage, who was an able financier, but whose record as the head of the largest banking institution in the west and his consequent acquaintance with New York bankers made it possible for his enemies to insinuate that many of his acts were actuated by his friendship to the latter. Governor Shaw is expected in Washington in the near future, but he will come only for a conference with the president and will not assume the duties of his new office before the first of February.

The selection of Governor Shaw recalls the statement of Senator Depp at the national convention when he said in nominating Mr. Roosevelt for the vice presidency. "The highest wisdom will be shown by this convention if it selects a western man with eastern ideas and an eastern man with western ideas." The western man with western ideas is now president and naturally he turns to the west for a goodly number of his advisers. When Messrs. Shaw and Payne have taken their seats there will be four members from the central west, and Iowa will have not only two cabinet members but the chairman of the senate committee on appropriations and the speaker of the house of representatives.

The rumor that went abroad that Secretary Wilson would resign is without foundation. In his usual prompt manner the president determined to invite Governor Shaw to enter the cabinet and immediately communicated with him. When Mr. Wilson heard of it he went to the White House and told the president that if the presence of two Iowa men in the cabinet was going to embarrass the administration he was ready to resign but Mr. Roosevelt assured him that there would be no embarrassment and that he could not spare him as he not only appreciated the value his services had been to the administration in the past, but would need them more than ever in the future in view of the prospective revision legislation, a subject on which the president and his secretary of agriculture are in hearty accord. The rumor that Mr. F. D. Coburn of Kansas will be Secretary Wilson's successor is becoming a time-worn and battle-scarred ghost but will doubtless be launched as something new every time Mr. Coburn's friends can find the least excuse for it.

The statement that Secretary Long will resign is again revived and will not down because it is founded on fact. Secretary Long wishes to resign and will do so whenever he concludes that the feeling over the Sampson-Schley controversy has subsided sufficiently to permit of his so doing without its being said that he is either running away from the consequences of his acts or that the president has signified disapproval of them to an extent that has forced his resignation. Speaking of Secretary Long, there have been published certain statements to the effect that he has not done his part in the social duties which devolve on a cabinet minister and that pointlessness was the cause. Mr. Long is a comparatively poor man and although he has not entertained extensively he has doubtless exceeded his salary and has also suffered a great bereavement recently.

Jumped from the Bridge.

John S. Pinover, who was in the wholesale liquor business in Middletown, N. Y., jumped from the Brooklyn bridge last Sunday. He was picked up unconscious and taken to a hospital. He had made no preparations for the jump and was clad in the ordinary way. Going down he turned three somersaults but struck the water feet first. When he came up boatmen got a grip on him with their hooks and pulled him aboard a tug. Blood was running from his mouth and nose but he revived sufficiently to relate a few facts concerning himself. He was an athlete and, though doing a good business, seemed to be despondent and melancholy. His place of business was near that of Louis Rudolph, who saw him frequently and also last Friday when on his way to take the train for New York.

OBITUARY

D. A. DISGMAN. Daniel Augustus Dingman, a highly esteemed citizen of Cedar Rapids, Iowa, died at his home in that city Dec. 15 after a protracted illness. He was a son of the late Daniel W. and Elizabeth (e Carter) Dingman and was born at Dingman's Ferry in Delaware township, this county, Nov. 19, 1841, and was descended from one of the oldest families in this valley. His great grandfather was a soldier in the Revolutionary war and in the war of 1812 his grandfather, Judge Dingman, was for twenty-six years in succession an associate judge of this county and his father was its first chief prothonotary, having been appointed by Governor Ritter in 1856. When yet a youth in 1856, his father having died and his mother having married Oliver Emery, they removed to Cedar Rapids, where he afterward entered into business and became prominent in the affairs of the town. He served in the army during the war of the rebellion and was for several years assistant fire chief, in which position he displayed great courage and ability. Sept. 7, 1878, he married Miss Alice Barton Moody, who, with one daughter, Annie E., survives him.

GEORGE WELTON WARNER.

Mr. Warner, an aged resident of Bridgeport, Ct., and probably the oldest lawyer in that city, died at his home Tuesday, Dec. 24, after a brief illness. He was born at Roxbury, Warners Mills, Ct., May 8, 1821, of revolutionary stock, graduated at Yale college in 1836, and after three years spent in teaching at Marlborough, N. C., entered the law school at New Haven, Ct. After admission to the bar he located at Bridgeport, where he has since resided and where he served two terms as probate judge. He married Mary Augustine, only daughter of the late Cyrille C. D. Pinchot of this town, who, with one daughter, Iva, wife of Geo. B. Poirier of New York, survives him. He is also survived by brothers, Ebenezer of this borough, Seth of Roxbury, Ct., and sisters, Emma A. and Catharine, both unmarried, of Roxbury, Oliva, wife of Sanford Johnson of Southbury, Ct., and Caroline E., widow of the late Charles S. Thrall of Oxford, Ct. Interment will be made at Roxbury, Ct.

MRS. LYDIA ANN BRINK.

After an illness of considerable duration incident to age, Mrs. Brink died at her home on George street, this borough Monday evening, Dec. 30. She was a daughter of the late Benjamin and Elizabeth Brink Deake and was born in Dingman township April 26th, 1818, the oldest of a large family of children. She married Nicholas Brink, who died in Port Jervis about 34 years ago, when she moved to this town, which has since been her home. She was one of the oldest members of the M. E. church here, having united with it over fifty years ago. Possessed of an amiable disposition, domestic habits and pleasant manners, her walk in life was a graceful exemplification of kindness and Christian contentment. She is survived by one son, Oscar M., and by one sister, Mrs. James Quin, both of this borough. The funeral was held yesterday from the church, Rev. C. E. Scudder officiating, and interment in Milford cemetery.

JOSEPH LEE POLLON.

Death came very suddenly early Thursday morning, Jan. 2, to "Lee" Pollon. He had been slightly complaining the day previous but was about his work and nothing serious was anticipated. Shortly before midnight he grew rapidly worse and soon expired, heart failure being the immediate cause. He was a son of the late John J. and Ann M. Pollon, was born about twenty-seven years ago and has always resided here. He was an industrious and faithful young man and greatly attached to his family. Some years ago he married Nettie Tilman, who, with two young daughters, Eva and Margaret, survives him. He is also survived by his mother, a sister, Fannie, and one brother, John J. The funeral will take place tomorrow, Saturday, at 2 p. m. at the Pollon home.

BRIEF MENTION.

The president shook hands with 8100 people at his public reception New Year's day. Andrew Yetter of Blairtown lost by the recent floods about $2,500 worth of lumber and ties. The time for holding the republican-state convention has been fixed for Wednesday, Jan. 4, at Harrisburg. J. H. Ludwig has removed his family from the house on upper Broad street to one next Boyd's shop. The county commissioners have gone today to meet the Wayne officials at the site of Cromwelltown bridge in Palmyra. Ex-Attorney General John W. Griggs is favorably considered as a candidate for United States senator to succeed Senator Sewell of New Jersey, lately deceased. Candidates for county superintendent have been making hay during the past week and no doubt the several directors in the county are now fully advised of the situation. Emperor William of Germany has asked that Alice, a daughter of President Roosevelt, may be allowed to christen his new yacht now building in the United States. His request will be preferred through Ambassador White. There were fifty in attendance at the Masonic supper at the Crismon House last Friday evening. The menu was excellent and well served and all present had fine appetites, which is superior to any such occasions. The event was thoroughly enjoyed by the participants, among whom were several invited guests. Devoze, the weather prophet of Hackensack, predicted a fierce blizzard for Jan. 1 and that the first ten days of January would be very cold with another blizzard Jan. 9. After Jan. 15 he says warmer weather with rains will prevail and that the snow and ice will then disappear. Now watch the fulfillment. Mrs. F. Berthoud recently discovered that parties, to her unknown, had visited her house on upper Harford street, entered by means of a key and evidently enjoyed themselves by cooking, sleeping in the beds and ransacking the premises. Nothing of value, however, seems to have been carried away. Mrs. Wm. J. Milligan of Philadelphia has published a history of the descendants of Jabez Rockwell, a revolutionary soldier, and sheriff of Wayne county for one term. His son, Lewis, was sheriff of this county in 1844, defeating the late John Cornelius by five votes. Mrs. Anna Wells, wife of Nathan Wells, late of Milford, was a daughter. The facts were compiled by C. F. Rockwell of Honesdale.

Trespass Suit.

The trespass suit brought by Geo. W. McCarty of Montague against Randolph Travis of the same township for hunting on posted lands was heard last week before Esquire Jas. B. Fuller, who fined the defendant ten dollars. From this judgment he appealed, with T. V. Cole as surety, and the matter will probably be determined in the Sussex county courts. Immediately after the suit Travis was arrested by J. B. Hendershot, game warden, for hunting on a tracking snow and gave bail for his appearance.

W. I. Yancy, Paducah, Ky., writes:

"I had a severe case of kidney disease and three of the best physicians in southern Kentucky treated me without success. I was induced to try Foley's Kidney Cure. The first bottle gave immediate relief and three bottles cured me permanently. I gladly recommend this wonderful remedy." Take no substitute. Sold at Armstrong's drug store.

Laws of Custom.

The president of the United States is hedged about with several unwritten laws which, though not legally binding, do circumscribe his actions, and which through deference to custom he considers binding. He must not leave the country even for a short space of time. President McKinley on his trip south last May did not cross the boundary line into Mexico but received President Diaz' personal representative at El Paso, Texas. At this point an international bridge spans the Rio Grande and the president went to its entrance to catch a glimpse of the country into which official custom forbade him to enter. President Harrison a few years ago walked to the centre of the bridge where is the line separating the two countries but he did not set his foot across it. Neither can the president enter any foreign embassy or legation, for in Washington the official residences of foreign representatives are as much foreign territory as if they were situated in foreign countries. They are exempt from taxation and immune from our legal processes. Neither can the president go aboard a foreign warship. This rule is explained had its origin in the precaution against a possible plot to abduct the executive. President Arthur, however, once accepted an invitation to lunch on a foreign warship at Newport. A president may not make a formal call attired in ceremonial dress upon any one except a president-elect, an ex-president, a president of a foreign state, or a reigning monarch visiting here. This, however, does not debar informal calls on whomsoever he pleases. He may not receive any but intimate friends on Sunday and only the most urgent reasons are accepted as excuses for so doing. State receptions or dinners are not held during Lent. This rule originated with Washington, who was a communicant of the Episcopal church, and is probably a relic of England's religious influences. A president may never pay a first call except on the arrival of the head of a foreign state in Washington. A crowned prince is beneath him in rank and must be first to make the social advance.

THE RAMBLER'S PICKINGS.

Well, the holidays are over, and some people are glad of it. Observer of Montague does not use us right. They are having considerable excitement over there and he never tells us anything about it. A trespass case was decided against R. Travis, defendant. He appealed, was arrested by the game warden for hunting in the open season, threatened with arrest for carrying a gun on the highway, etc., and he, the defendant, is willing the law shall be obeyed so far as he is concerned, but he means to have others obey the law as far as the law concerns their business. The chances are the April grand jury of the Sussex county court will have some matters brought before it from Montague which may affect certain parties in public business. Better stop, boys, and drop your animosities. It will be cheaper in the long run. Once a fight is started it is hard to tell where it will stop. The sudden and unexpected death of Lee Pollon cast a gloom over this community yesterday.

The outlook for gathering ice is growing better. It is some time before spring yet. It is Sheriff Geo. Gregory now. Jake Van Tassel, John Watts and Jas. E. Boyd took in the New Year's excursion to New York. The old year blew out and 1902 blew in at the rate of 70 miles an hour. Mike Callahan is seriously ill with pneumonia. His friends, and they include every one in town, hope for his speedy recovery. As we begin the new year, the question arises, are we better now than one year ago?

Couldn't Weigh the Anchor.

A landsman was once appointed to a position in the navy by political favoritism. Soon after coming on board he went to the captain with a long face and said, "They have just told me to weigh the anchor, and I don't know where the scales are!" Some people seem to know as little about weighing evidence as the landsman knew about weighing the anchor. Mrs. Arthur H. Dodge at a recent anti-suffrage meeting is reported to have said that equal suffrage in Colorado was a failure, but that it was impossible to obtain for publication letters from Colorado testifying to the fact. Note the significance of this admission. When public sentiment in a community is largely divided upon any question, there is no trouble in getting expressions of opinion upon both sides. If there is even a strong minority upon one side, there are sure to be members of that minority who are ready to state their views. If it is found impossible to get letters from Colorado declaring equal suffrage to be a failure it means, not that there is no one in Colorado who regards it as a failure, but that such persons are so few as to be unwilling to express themselves against the overwhelming preponderance of public opinion in their state to the contrary. There is no possible escape from this conclusion.

In Wyoming equal suffrage has prevailed for thirty-two years; and for fifteen years the friends of suffrage have had a standing challenge, inviting its opponents to find two respectable persons in the whole state who will assert over their own names and addresses that it has had any bad results whatever. The opponents have thus far failed to respond.—Alice Stone Blackwell.

It is a mystery why women endure Backache, Headache, Nervousness, Sleeplessness, Melancholy, Fainting and Dizzy Spells when thousands have proved that Electric Bitters will quickly cure such troubles.
