HEALTH COMMANDMENTS.

Common-Sense Suggestions Which Should Be Followed by Home-bodies.

The requirements of health can be counted on the fingers of one hand, says the Philadelphia Times. They are good air, good food, suitable clothing, cleanliness and exercise and rest. The first two requirements affect the blood, and as the blood circulates all over the body, including the brain, every part is affected. Fresh air affects the purity of the blood. The freshest air is out of doors, and it is the duty of every one who wishes to be in good health to spend a certain amount of time in the open air. Good food is not necessarily expensive food. Exercise and rest should alternate and balance each other. It is quite possible to take too much exercise, and this side of the question must be guarded against as carefully as the other. Women, as a rule, do not rest sufficiently. Every woman should try during the day to get a few minutes' rest, even if it interferes with her regular work. It is impossible for her to attend to the health and welfare of her family if her own health suffers from overwork and lack of rest. She should follow her husband's example. Although he is busy all day long, he generally makes it a hard and fast rule to rest during the evening in the best way, namely, by change of employment.

W. L. Yancy, Paducah, Ky., writes: "I had a severe case of kidney disease and three of the best physicians in southern Kentucky treated me without success. I was induced to try Foley's Kidney Cure. The first bottle gave immediate relief and three bottles cured me permanently. I gladly recommend this wonderful remedy." Take no substitute. Sold at Armstrong's.

An Ideal Husband. Mrs. De Plain: "My husband never leaves me for an hour without kissing me. Neighboring Callers—I can readily believe it. Everybody says your husband is the most considerate, unselfish, self-sacrificing man in the world.—Trib-Bis.

N. Jackson, Danville, Ill., writes: "My daughter had a severe attack of the grippe and a terrible cough settled on her lungs. We tried a great many remedies without giving relief. She tried Foley's Honey and Tar which cured her. She has never been troubled with a cough since." Sold at Armstrong's drug store.

He Knew. Little Eben (who has an inquiring mind)—Paw, what does "ambidextrous" mean?

Farmers' Quack—Why—eh-h'm!—I guess it means a fellow that can steal with both hands.—Puck.

For Pneumonia. Dr. C. J. Bishop, Agnow, Mich., says, "I have used Foley's Honey and Tar in three very severe cases of pneumonia with good results in every case." Beware of substitutes. Sold at Armstrong's drug store.

The Last Word Again. He—I wonder why it is, when two women are parting, that they say good-by so many times?

She—Because each doesn't want the other to have the last word.—Youkers Statesman.

You should know that Foley's Honey and Tar is absolutely the best for all diseases of the throat and lungs. Dealers are authorized to guarantee it to give satisfaction. Sold at Armstrong's drug store.

Value of Obscurity. "He was foolish to propose to her on such short acquaintance; of course she refused him."

"Well, you see, he thought his chances were better the less she knew of him."—Trib-Bis.

Chopped hands, cracked lips and roughness of the skin cured quickly by Baumer Salve, the most healing ointment in the world. Sold at Armstrong's drug store.

A Hard Question. "Daddy," asked little Jack, "where does a snake begin when he wants to tag his tail?"—N. Y. Tribune.

If Baumer Salve Doesn't cure your piles, your money will be returned. It is the most healing medicine. Sold at Armstrong's drug store.

THIS YEAR'S CAMPAIGN

Increasing Activity in Pennsylvania Politics.

GOVERNOR AND CONGRESSMEN

Republicans Expect the Subaltern Candidate Will Unite and Not Divide the Party—Colonel Wares the Only Man Who Has Declared His Candidacy—The Political Outlook in the State.

Harrisburg, Pa., —Politics would be quoted "active" if they were on the stock list these days. With the opening of the New Year and the approach of the February elections there is evidence of increased interest in municipal and state affairs, and many are discussing the gubernatorial prospect with increased zest. Pittsburg continues the storm center of city politics owing to the peculiar condition precipitated by the application of the "ripper" act, which has been hotter than football in that section, now giving victory to one faction and again to the other. What the effect of the Pittsburg fight will be on the gubernatorial issue is still problematical, but it will be noticed that the Democrats are more confident of victory in the ensuing city election than they have been in many years at this time. Of course the confidence of the Pittsburg Democrats is due to the desperate factional quarrels of the Republicans, occasioned by that apple of discord, the now notorious "ripper" which has been as industrious as a Chinese executioner chopping off heads. The immediate fight in Pittsburg is for control of the city's politics. State Senator Fitts, and those who are opposed to him, attach great importance to the control of the city and the council, and the conflict in the Republican party has inspired great hopes in the breasts of the Smoky City Democrats.

FACTIONISM ILLUSTRATED.

The situation affords a first-class illustration of the practical workings of factional warfare, and how it may weaken a party that is impregnable when it is united. If the condition now agitating Pittsburg should extend to the state through an error of judgment or over-confidence in forcing an undesirable nomination for governor on the state convention, the party would have good cause for apprehension in a wider field and upon far more important issues than those which at present distract and divide the Republicans of Pittsburg. Everywhere throughout the commonwealth the Democratic voice is for united councils, while among Republicans, from Pittsburg to Philadelphia, the sinister spirit of faction is manifested more or less. What to attribute this to I scarcely know unless it be a result of the confidence which the party feels in its own strength, but I have talked to more than one Republican who believes that it will be necessary to present a united front in the approaching campaign in order to win a victory.

THE ONLY AVOWED CANDIDATE.

Although more than one name has been "suggested" for the Republican nomination for governor, Colonel L. A. Wares, of Lackawanna, is the only man who has come squarely before the people of the state to announce his candidacy openly and above board. He has not hesitated to take the entire party into his confidence with a modest, candid declaration of his honorable purpose to aspire to the gubernatorial chair of the state, and there have not been wanting indications in the best Republican newspapers that his fair and manly course is appreciated among the most ardent adherents of political orthodoxy and regularity. Nothing politically has a greater fascination for the American mind than the thought that the average boy of the right stamp, no matter how poor he may have been at his birth, can aspire to the highest office in the gift of the people, and that he is free to voice this aspiration to his fellow-citizens without prejudice to his chances of success. While others have been mentioned from time to time by way of feeling the public pulse, Colonel Wares has stood openly before his fellow-Republicans, basing his candidacy on his merits, his fealty to party, and his unalterable devotion to its high purposes. Up to the present time he is the only Republican who has announced his candidacy for governor of Pennsylvania. He takes the broad ground that he is willing to stand or fall by the verdict of the entire party, and there are those who believe this is the only verdict that can shape a winning nomination in the next state convention.

THE DISTRICT ELECTIONS.

The words of warning uttered by Hon. Thomas V. Cooper, of Delaware, a short time since to the effect that an unpopular machine-made nomination for governor would mean the loss of six congressional districts to the Republicans of Pennsylvania next fall, caused some uneasiness in certain quarters and there was an attempt to answer the Sage of Delaware. The answer was to the effect that the congressional districts would have to take care of themselves, and that they would not be affected in any way by the gubernatorial nomination, good or bad. That, it seemed to me and a good many others, was a rather flippant view to take of very serious questions. In the first place a boiler-plate answer is never satisfactory. Mr. Cooper understated rather than exaggerated the situation. An undesirable nomination for governor, made in disregard of the popular will, and in accordance with methods that do not take into account the preferences of the party, would act as a blight not only on many a congressional district but on the legislative districts as well, and send the party to the rear in a good many counties where commissioners and district attorneys are to be elected next fall. Secondly, it would mean, such in all probability, defeat for the Republican candidate for the successful nomination to United States Senator Penrose. This is no idle theory. It was amply illustrated in the elections of last fall, where the Republican majorities of one year ago were turned into minorities because of undesirable and unpopular candidates on the state ticket. Candidates for congressmen, for legislators and for county office, as well as aspirants for the United States senate will view with dismay the nomination of any man for governor whose candidacy will be a source of weakness and not of strength to the party. Such a candidate would mean shipwreck to the hopes and aspirations of many a personally deserving Republican, and it is not surprising, therefore, that certain announcements made recently in some of the newspapers have caused something like consternation throughout the state. In my travels I hear some plain talk on this subject from regular Republicans who wonder if the party managers would be so indifferent to the interests of the party generally as to nominate a candidate for governor who would cast the shadow of defeat over every district and county in the state and put every Republican candidate, newspaper and voter in the commonwealth on the defensive from the day of the state convention until the polls close.

Frank Treadwell, Bennett, Pa., was troubled with kidney disease for two years. He writes: "I had taken several kidney remedies, but with little benefit. Finally I tried Foley's Kidney Cure and a dollar bottle cured me." Sold at Armstrong's drug store.

Relieve Your Nerves With Casson's. Only Casson's, pure, unadulterated, 25c. 50c. 10c. C. C. Hall, Druggists, Port Jervis, N. Y.

The conservative Philadelphia Press, in its editorial on the nomination of Charles Emory Smith, who recently resigned the office of postmaster general to take the editorial helm, says emphatically that with an undesirable candidate for governor, the Republicans would have cause to be concerned over the congressional elections. The Press presents the case at a glance in showing that "The present delegation in congress consists of twenty-six Republicans and four Democrats, but that it is elected in the last presidential year when the state gave a Republican majority of 558,000. Last November when there was a majority of 49,000 for Democrats, the majorities in eleven congressional districts. The year that Governor Stone was a candidate, and when he did not have a majority, but was elected on a plurality merely, the Democrats secured ten congressmen. The year that Governor Hastings was elected by a majority of 241,000 but two Democrats were elected to congress in the whole state. These facts show pretty conclusively that, while there should be no relation between voting for governor and voting for congressmen, it makes a very decided difference when the candidate for governor the people will enthusiastically support, and who will attract and not repel votes." This is the situation in a nutshell, and it suggests the question whether the party throughout the state is to be sacrificed in the interest of a machine candidate for governor.

HOW VICTORY MAY BE WON.

Although it has been announced more than once that United States Senator Quay is to take an active part in politics, and that upon the completion of his present term in the senate he will enter the arena of private life, it is not in the nature of things that he would like to see his party go down under defeat in such an important year as this. It is only help. The senator's loyalty to his friends is one of his best traits, but his loyalty to the party is his greatest. He repeatedly has declared that when he takes counsel of his best judgment he will readily see where victory lies, and where defeat may be averted. Without mincing words, victory is to be won with a clean, loyal Republican candidate like Colonel Louis Arthur Wares, whose popularity was proved in a crucial state campaign, and whose quality was shown by his ability and fact as president of the state senate while serving as lieutenant governor. Colonel Wares is free from the suspicion of any kind of secret. No tongue can wag against his Republicanism or his integrity, and his nomination for governor, and his election to the state ticket, but of the Republican party in congressional and legislative districts, and the county seats as well. In addition to his personal worth the fact that Colonel Wares has declared himself a candidate for governor, and is the only man in the party who has done so thus far, commends him to every Republican who believes in manly methods within the letter of the constitution. It is not the fault of the party that the staff of the governors of Pennsylvania should be made, and the people may rest assured that with his election they would have an executive who would reflect credit on the state of Pennsylvania. It is not the fault of the party that the nomination of a Republican candidate for the Keystone State in this year of grace.

POLITICS AND INDUSTRY.

Pennsylvania, a giant in industry, cannot afford to be a pigmy in politics. This state is the steel center of civilization at the beginning of the new century. Its enterprise is the admiration of the world; its products are reaching out in every direction along the highway of expansion. It has kept the flag of protection flying until the victory of industrial supremacy has been won, not only for this but for every state in the Union, and it cannot now commit the fatal blunder of nominating a man for governor whose election will imperil Pennsylvania's representation in the congress of the United States. The Republicans of this state should now, more than ever before, be anxious to have a full voice in national affairs, in senate and house, and the surest way to secure that is by beginning right and nominating a man like Colonel Wares for governor; one whose leadership will unite the party, inspire enthusiasm and insure success. And, after all, is not this what the Republicans of Pennsylvania want this year when a governor, United States senator, legislature and county officials are to be elected. Since I began writing this letter I have ascertained that ex-Governor Pattison's enthusiastic friends in the interior counties, have begun passing resolutions glorifying him for governor. Without pretending familiarity with the penetrability of Democratic inspiration, I am convinced that Mr. Pattison will be the next nominee of his party for governor of Pennsylvania, and that this year's campaign will be one of the liveliest in the history of the state.

There is nothing like Asthmalene. It brings instant relief, even in the worst cases. It cures when all else fails.

The Rev. C. F. WELLS, of Villa Ridge, Ill., says: "Your trial bottle of Asthmalene relieved in good condition. I cannot tell you how thankful I feel for the good derived from it. I was a slave, chained with pain, sore throat and asthma for years. I despaired of ever being cured. I saw your advertisement for the cure of this dreadful and tormenting disease, and thought you had overlooked yourselves, but resolved to give it a trial. To my astonishment, the trial netted like a charm. Send me a full sized bottle."

Rev. Dr. Morris Weohler, of Villa Ridge, Ill., says: "I have tried numerous remedies, but they have all failed. I saw your advertisement and started with a trial bottle. I found relief at once. I have since purchased your full-size bottle, and I am ever grateful. I have a family of four children, and for six years was unable to work. I am now in the best of health and am doing business every day. This testimony you can make such use of as you see fit. Home address, 228 Livingston street.

ARE YOU DEAF? ANY HEAD NOISES?

ALL CASES OF DEAFNESS OR HARD HEARING ARE NOW CURABLE by our new invention. Only those born deaf are incurable. HEAD NOISES CEASE IMMEDIATELY.

F. A. WERMAN, OF BALTIMORE, Md. writes: "I was entirely cured of deafness, thanks to your treatment. I will now give you a full history of my case, to be used at your discretion. About five years ago my right ear began to ring, and this kept on getting worse, until I lost my hearing in this ear entirely. I underwent a treatment for catarrh, for three months, without any success, consulted a number of physicians, among others, the most eminent ear specialist of this city, who told me that only an operation could help me, and that only a few days before the operation, the noise would then cease, but the hearing in the affected ear would be lost forever. Then saw your advertisement accidentally in a New York paper, and ordered your treatment. After had used it only a few days according to your directions, the noise ceased, and today, after five weeks, my hearing in the diseased ear has been entirely restored. I thank you heartily and beg to remain Very truly yours, F. A. WERMAN, 726 S. Broadway, Baltimore, Md.

Our treatment does not interfere with your usual occupation. Examination and YOU CAN CURE YOURSELF AT HOME at a nominal price. INTERNATIONAL AURAL CLINIC, 598 LA SALLE AVE., CHICAGO, ILL.
