THE NEXT GOVERNOR

Men and Newspapers Outspoken For Colonel Watres.

IMPORTANCE OF THE DELEGATES

The People's Opportunity at the Primaries. Where the Popular Will Should Find Expression—Increasing Demand For a Candidate Like Colonel Watres, Who Will Lead a United Party to Victory—Robust Republican Sentiment.

Harrisburg, Pa., Feb. 24.—The people's opportunity is at the primaries. When that duty is neglected or suffered to go by default it is idle to indulge in denunciations of others who may be quick to take advantage of popular apathy and turn it to their own account. Press and platform, grange and lodge may ring with denunciations of machine politics, but if the voters fail to use the power they possess at the primaries they must blame themselves for the result. If we sow tares we cannot expect a harvest of wheat; or if we spend all the planting season in idleness we cannot hope for a harvest of any kind. "Strike while the iron is hot" is a practical motto. It means that we should seize the opportune moment to do the right thing. The primary is the hot iron of politics. If we let it cool and undertake to strike afterward, we shall strike to no purpose; but if we go to the primaries and insist upon the exercise of our rights as citizens in the election of delegates to county district and state conventions, we shall have no occasion for regret later on when we see the party standard upheld by men of our own choosing and not by machine-appointed candidates. There is need for urgent action in the present political condition of affairs in Pennsylvania. If the next Republican state convention is to give full, free and fair expression to the popular judgment of the party in the choice of a candidate for governor like Colonel A. Watres, who stands for genuine, unadulterated, non-factional, upright and square Republicanism. If the wholesome sentiment now prevailing throughout the state in behalf of Colonel Watres takes practical shape at the primaries in the election of delegates who are favorable to him, his nomination is certain, and his triumphant election as the next governor of Pennsylvania is a foregone conclusion.

IMPORTANCE OF DELEGATES

The importance of sending delegates to the state convention who are friendly to the nomination of Colonel Watres can readily be understood. If they are instructed for him it will relieve them of the importunities with which delegates are usually beset, and will also insure the nomination of a winning candidate for governor, who will also be instrumental in carrying those congressional and legislative districts and counties that are now considered doubtful, and that will assuredly be lost to the party in case it should be handicapped with an undesirable nomination. I mention Colonel Watres as the candidate around whom the rank and file of the Republican party should rally, because there are only two candidates in the field, and Colonel Watres is the only one who has made his appeal direct to the party at large, in accordance with the best traditions of popular government. This is one of the reasons, although there are many others, why Republicans from end to end of the state should join in the great popular movement for his nomination. It is the judgment of many veteran Republicans who want to see the party united, harmonious and successful, that Colonel Watres is the man with whom to accomplish this desirable result, and they want him nominated for governor, because his candidacy would put an end to factional bickering and carry with it the assurance of victory from the moment of his nomination. With Colonel Watres as the standard-bearer the Republican newspapers, orators and advocates would not be called upon to enter into a campaign of defense, apology and explanation, and the ghost of the "ripper" bill would not be an issue in the canvass. This is the sentiment among those who are urging his nomination, and they are all sincere, earnest, loyal Republicans, anxious for party success.

PARTY LEADERS FOR WATRES

Despite the effort put forward to prove that the opponent of Colonel Watres is the "residuary legatee" of the present administration at Harrisburg, the fact remains that outside that circle the accredited Republican leaders—men who are more solicitous for party success than for the success of a faction, favor the nomination of Colonel Watres for governor. Chief United States Senator Cameron's chief concern in this year's campaign is for party unity and victory, and it is no longer a secret that he desires to see Watres nominated. In Luzerne county the brilliant Congressman Henry W. Palmer, who was one of the ablest and most high-minded members of the state constitutional convention which Kidney complaint kills more people than any other disease. This is due to the disease being so insidious that it gets a good hold on the system before it is recognized. Foley's Kidney Cure will prevent the development of fatal disease if taken in time. Sold at Armstrong's drug store.

traded Pennsylvania's present organic law, is earnest and outspoken for Watres. In Lackawanna county Major Everett Warren, a leading member of the bar, a former president of the State League of Republican Clubs, and a delegate to the last national convention that nominated President McKinley, is active and eloquent in urging the nomination of Colonel Watres. Wayne, Pike, Monroe, Susquehanna, Bradford, and in fact the whole north-eastern tier of counties, are enthusiastic for Watres, and the sentiment in his behalf is extending rapidly throughout the state.

WATRES CLUBS ORGANIZED

And it is not the men of prominence alone who are active in behalf of Colonel Watres. The strength and popularity of his candidacy are seen in the organization of Watres Clubs throughout the state. These clubs are forming in every one of the 47 counties of the commonwealth, and their membership is numerous and impressive. From what I can learn of this feature of the preliminary campaign the sentiment for Watres is assuming the proportions of a tidal wave all over the Keystone State. It is one of the most remarkable demonstrations made in favor of any candidate in a good many years and it is practical and will prove effective. The friends of Colonel Watres desire that this growing sentiment in his behalf shall be shaped into delegates who will go to the state convention pledged to his support. The election of delegates is in the hands of the people, and they will miss a great opportunity if they fail to avail themselves of their prerogative at the primaries. The hope of the machine is that the people will neglect the primaries and, so permit the selection of delegates who can be manipulated at the state convention.

ROBUST REPUBLICAN SENTIMENT

Robust Republican sentiment is asserting itself in favor of the nomination of Colonel Watres not only in the outspoken utterances of leading members of the party, but in the newspapers as well. Within the week I have noticed unmistakable evidence of this in some of the best party journals in the state. These papers are both Republican and regular. They voice the spirit of the party, and are not the mere echoes of factional oracles. They are edited by men who are evidently anxious for victory in their respective districts as well as in the state, and who want to see a candidate nominated for governor whose name will be a shibboleth for success. The Harrisburg Herald, of Susquehanna county, may be accepted as a fair representative of the general drift of unadulterated Republican journalistic opinion on the present situation. Susquehanna is a Republican county. It is the county of Galusha A. Grow, the veteran statesman and champion of Republican principles, whose name is a household word in this section. The Harrisburg Herald after paying tribute to the greatness of Pennsylvania politically and industrially, declares that in this year's campaign the party leaders should give the people a candidate for governor "who has never been directly or indirectly concerned in the obnoxious legislation that has been recently imposed upon the state against its wish and adverse to its real welfare, and one that he is otherwise irreconcilable." The Herald asks: "Would Colonel Watres meet these requirements?" and this is how it answers the question: "Those who have watched his career and are acquainted with his fine personality, will answer in the affirmative. He is an upright and fair man. He has had wide experience in the public affairs of the state. His administration of the office of lieutenant governor was above reproach. His course as senator met with the approval of the state. His name is not found connected with a single unwise enactment. He is young, high minded, energetic and fearless. He is a successful business man and not a professional politician. He stands well with his party, and the leaders have always found him fighting on the side that obtained for the straight party organization, the wisest and safest result. He has not only the respect of the people, but he has the respect of the best straight Republicans in the organization. He is a party man, strong, vigorous and brave in all things connected with the true welfare of the state. He would inspire the young voters to active work. He would enable the old leaders to inaugurate an offensive campaign from the start. He would bring a united support to the ticket of the best of the straight and independent elements in the party."

The best of all this is that every word of it is true, and that it is a modest presentation of the merits of Colonel Watres. It is, moreover, an expression of the opinion entertained by the most thoughtful men and newspapers in the state, those who are not willing to sacrifice the permanent success of the party for the fleeting triumph of a faction. I do not overstate the case when I assert that all the indications at the present writing overwhelmingly favor Colonel Watres, of Lackawanna, as the Republican candidate for governor of Pennsylvania.

WERMAN, OF BALTIMORE, SAYS: Baltimore, Md., March 30, 1901. Gentlemen:—Being entirely cured of deafness, thanks to your treatment, I will now give you a full history of my case, to be used at your discretion. About five years ago my right ear began to ring, and this kept on getting worse, until I lost my hearing in this ear entirely. I underwent a treatment for catarrh, for three months, without any success, consulted a number of physicians, among others, the most eminent ear specialist of this city, who told me that only an operation could help me, and even that, only temporarily, that the best noise would then cease, but the hearing in the affected ear would be lost forever. I then saw your advertisement accidentally in a New York paper, and ordered your treatment. After I had used it only a few days according to your directions, the noises ceased, and to-day after five weeks, my left hearing in the diseased ear has been entirely restored. I thank you heartily and beg to remain, Very truly yours, F. A. WERMAN, 726 B. Broadway, Baltimore, Md.
