"But," put in Mrs. Johnop, "isn't $3.20 8 day pretry good gay for a working man-that just digs with a pick and shored." "Yes, midam," orangolarly registed Mr. Johann, "Silo a day would be good enough pay for em if they got it. But they don't get it, or anything like it. I don't happen to temember the exact figures at the moment, but I don't halpen to temember the exact figures at the moment, but I don't believe that they get mitted in a little of the milk of human kindness. Mrs. Johnon. I'm all right for you to sit here and talk, when you have never anything to do but to read defermine literature and talk, when you have never anything to do but to read defermine literature and talk in bergain, also, but it is no were the strongling, alaving wife of one of those undertunate Permaylvania miners pould be singing a different song. You.

"But," interrupted Mrs. Johnon again, "I they really receive mure than twice as much montey for the same work in this country as they got in the old country where they came from, why don't.

why don't-Now, you want to stop applying opping brings epithets to such of these granted miners as happen to be foreigners, broke in Mr. Jobson, crushingly. "You wouldn't have to go back many generations before you'd need up with the fiveign straip in sill of us, when it comes to that, and whather by re foreigners or not have t anything to with the matter. They're human beings, en't they? I guess if you had to lie on our stomach for about 18 hours a day, uveling around in the wet mines and work g with a pick, for a lew miserable pencies a y, you'd come pretty near being an any.

Well," monkly said Mrs. Johson, "it says ere in the paper that the strike is liable to let for a number of mouths, and that the rice of cost is going up all the time. It may that by the time the cool weather mass around goal is likely to cost $10 or less $20 a ton."

"There you go again about what it says in the newspaper," said Mr. Jobson, acridly. "That we are engaged? Let them think shows the diskers does the newspaper show about it any more than anybody else, I'd like to know? The newspaper's are also as long as we know that we are not. That says trying to spring these heignes on folks. But, when it comes to that, even if its forecast is correct, and coal does go to $20 a tem, who carres? Those minters are fighting for a great principle, madam, and so far as I am concerned, I don't care a nickol's worth of figs if coal goes to $30 a ton. I'd be more willing to pay the price to see the miners hatter down the strongholds of a relactives monopoly. That's the kind of a citizen I am."

"Mut we will be alse whole thing, Alien and people will say that I - that you - that we are engaged? Let them think we as long as we know that we are not. That is where the fun comes in. Keep them all to have me appear without any an expected. A nice lut to let you wander about by yourself."

"There is no one here that I care particularly for," said Derothy, demovely. "I—I rather prefer going alone."

By this time they were at the butel, and Allen, who was with a club of because.

Thus effectually squelched, Mrs. Jobson was glad to abundon the subject, but she was gind to abundon the subject, but she had an idea or so of her own as to the changed state of mind Mr. Johson would display as to the coal strike when the time arrived for him to disker for the first consignment of furnace coal. So when at the breakfast table the other morning Mr. Johson told her in an offland way that he intended to drop by the coal man's on his say home from the office and order five tons of coal for the furnace she was prepared for a little seame with Mr. Johson on his arrival home that afternoon, and her expectations were fully realized. breakfast table the other morning Mr. Jobson told her in an offland way that he introduced to drop by the coal man's on his say home from the office and order five tone of coal for the furnace she was prepared for a little seame with Mr. Jobson on his arrival home that afternoon, and her expectations were fully realized.

Mr. Johson stormed into the vestibule, his face as red as the comb of a turkey cock, and the veins of his foreshead sticking out afarmingly. He chapped his new derby on to the sitting room table with ferocomistores and began to stride up and down the room like a tiger.
