PAWNED A SKELETON.

The Oddest Thing Ever Taken as a Constructed, a House of Kindling

"The oddest thing I ever had offered to me," said a paymbroker, "was a skeleton, and I didn't take it. I hadn't any doubt that it was all right that the man who offered it owned it and had a right to sell it, but I didn't and had a right to sell it, but i didn't want it. I suppose he was a medical student who wanted money just then worse than he wanted a sketeton; but I didn't know anything about the value of human bones, and how much to advance on them, so 1 didn't take it.

"Of course, you understand that not all pawnbrokers take everything. There are men who advance money on nothing but watches and diamonds and Jewelry and pictures and that sort of things, and who wouldn't give anything on the handsomest satis-lined overcoat that over was, because it is not in their line. They have no conunlenges for keeping such things. Then there are pawabrokers doing a general business who take all sorts of things—practically any and every-thing that is offered them. THE WOOD RATH INDUSTRY.

In the natural bistory coming under my observation I have mit seen anything concerning the wood rat It may be that the rodent is too com from to attract special attention, but I am issuined to believe that, if he is widely distributed his is rarely ob-

About two years ago I became interested in a pair of wood rate that solved upon and possessed themselves of my wood house for a habitation The house is thirty fest long and one and of it used for a work beach, repair shop and tool house. The other end is used mainly for storing dry bladling wood and small stove wood The rats moved in when I was away for a period, and the pair found a good supply of dry pine sticks a foot to statesn inches in length split from widths from one to five inches, and there were a number of heavy sticks, of scantling in a corner. With notable industry the rate had piled the small sticks into a fairly regular pyra mid, using the heavy pieces they could not move for foundation and frame, adapting their architecture to the conditions of the location with remarkably ingunuity.

Their architecture fitted in with the andscape in the woodhnuse so well that it was some time before I noticed that the kindling wood was methodi-cally placed. As wet weather came and the kindling was needed. I frequently took an armful into the house. without realising that I was taking surguyles and cornices from a private

I now began to miss some of my portable property. Files, small chisels, nails, measuring sticks, patterns, places of leather and such articles would disappear from my work bench These from time to time I would find mixed in with the sticks in the building material used by the rats. Since, I am informed, this is one of the traits of the animal. They are so expessively industrious that they annex almost anything they can carry or drag with very indifferent ideas of property rights or ownership. They are partial to bright and glittering things, such as bits of grass, tin and metal.
