QUAINT OLD WARE.

Pettery from England That Mystified and Amused Milwaukseans. An array of curious yellow dishes, with quaint scraggy motions in unfamiliar disject, has Been the centre of attraction in the window of a china store on Milwaukee street for the last few days, and many persons have step-ped to spell out the adages and to wonder where the curious stuff came from. A few are familiar with it, but most persons are unaware that the "Alter Vale" ware, as it is called comes from Newton Abbot, in Devonshire, England and that the motions are in the Devonshire distort. Nowton Abbot is about twenty miles from Exeter and the pottery is an old one. The ware in a peculiarly rich, deep, yellow falence, with simple but offec-tive decoration in dark green and a deep brown-red, and the shapes are delightfully quaint. successor to John L. Mitchell, In 1888 he became National Chairman and through his sagacity and political acumen Harrison was elected. They disagreed as to the patronage and Quay in 1890 forced the nomination of Delamater instead of Hastings for governor of Pennsylvania, resulting in the election of Pattison.

In the National Convention of 1892 Quay sought to nominate Blaine but Harrison was nominated and defeated by Cleveland. In 1893 he was reelected to the Senate, and in 1899 after a deadlock and fight which continued throughout the session Covernor Stone appointed Quay to the Senate, and in 1901 he was elected.

Raising Dishrags

A novel enterprise, that of raising dishrags, is being exploited by a number of Southern California horticulturists, who received the inspiration for the scheme from Churles Richardson, whose gardens in Pasadens are becoming famous for their remarkable productions. Mr. Richardson has successfully raised many growths new to American soil, and this year is exceeding all his previous triumphs by raising thousands of dishrags.

Last year Mr. Richardson's string seans, which measured forty-three inches in length, created a stir, but dishrag vines, which, with their pendant dishrags - twine about orange trees, palms, evergreens and peach trees, and peek in at the two story windows, bid fair to win the championship from the beans.

These dishrage, or vegetable sponges, as they are sometimes called, are indigenous to Africa, but now it has been demonstrated that they will thrive in this country they | are bound to become a popular production.

The graceful, well foliaged vines are not only ornamental, but they bear in profusion a fibrous sponge that is eminently useful for bathing as well as for scouring pans and kettles. Imagine picking dishrage in one's garden just as one would pick blackberries, or imagine having vines all laden with dishrags clambering over one's kitchen windows so that all one needs to do is to stretch out an arm and pull one in. Such an arrangement would be much easier than going to the ragbag or buying dishraga at stores.

These curious vegetables assume the form and appearance of cuenmbers, and hang on the vines until their green coats become brown and dry like parchment. At this stage they are ready to harvest. After they are picked the brown coat is removed, and an extremely strong and compact fibrons sponge is revealed. Through the centre of this sponge, in three lengthwise compartments, are many black seeds which shake out easily. In the Phot grapher. Pasadena garden these sponges have avoraged eight inches in length. (19 54

In 1900 the farmers were prosperous and farm prices were good. Populism squeaked a few times and democrata were unable to make any serious inroads to the republican phalanx despite their ories of imperialism, impending downfall of the constitution and American liberty, and such like. The situation has not materially changed. The country is still prosperons, money is plenty and prices are good; the republican party has kept faith with the people, the administration has been alert and resourceful, its internal policy has been wise and beneficial, its foreign policy has been strong and has elevated the ficials, and the coming campaign will soon demonstrate that it is useless to go up against solid, substantial facts—genuine prosperity, good prices and actual contentment with any calamity howls and danger cries, however vociterous or im-
