MARK OF A THOROUGHbred.

He Will Keep Going When a Common Horse Will Quit.

As an old horseman who has bred and handled horses of many types, says a writer in Outing, I have frequently been surprised at the answers given by the majority of people when asked the question: "What constitutes the most striking difference between the thoroughbred and the common horse?"

Nineteen out of twenty will name the beauty or the speed of the thoroughbred; but important as are both of these qualities, neither answer is correct. It is simply that the thoroughbred when he is tired will keep on with an undiminished courage and ambition, while a common horse under the same circumstances will quit.

Even the Snail.

The "muck snail" is a new specimen which will have to be added to the collection of strange things served by restaurant keepers. The edible snail is disappearing from the vineyards and gardens of Burgundy, where formerly it existed in countless thousands. The scarcity and consequent dearthness of the escargot has caused some unscrupulous proprietors of restaurants in Paris to invent the muck snail. It is made out of veal. All that is required is a quantity of empty snail shells and veal fat. The fat is cleverly cut into spirals and worked into the shell. The disappearance of the real snail is taken so seriously in France that the county council of the Cote d'Or has suggested that a law should be passed giving the escargot a close season, from April 15 to July 15 in each year.

Life's Adjusting Power.

Life seems to have a sort of adjusting power. We always suffer one way or another for the wrong we do, and unquestionably we are always rewarded for the good actions. There is no happiness in revenge, no joy in hatred, no inspiration in jealousy and meanness. It is when we have come to a quiet understanding of the ill-effects of our baser sentiments that we become refined and grow into better, more wholesome conditions. It is usually the one who runs away from the fight who is the stronger. Punishment will be meted out to your enemy; it isn't for you to judge and convict. All these matters are taken care of—just how we do not know, and after all, it does not matter.

Anger Shrinks Vitality.

Dr. Maurice de Fleury, a distinguished Frenchman, advances the theory that every time one becomes angry his vitality shrinks. After even the most artfully suppressed signs of bad temper the vitality becomes smaller and smaller, until finally nothing is left. Anger is a certain kind of cerebral excitement, explains Dr. de Fleury. The hypersthenic subject is always on its verge, while the neurasthenic becomes infuriated only by a sudden bound of reaction excited from without. But at that moment when they are let loose the two are alike, save that the strong man is a blinder brute, while the weak man is somewhat of an actor and seems to aim at effect.

True Missionary Spirit.

Speaking at a recent meeting of the Colonial and Continental Church society, in London, the bishop of North Queensland said: "I spoke at Oxford the other day, and asked for men to help me in our great work. Eight of the finest young graduates volunteered to go back to the bush with me. Then I searched for a leader, and turned to Ireland, the home of missionaries. I sent a telegram to Rev. E. H. Crozier, vicar of St. George's, Dublin, asking him if he would give up his rich living, worth £500 a year net, and come and be the leader of my band of recruits in the bush at £20 a year. The answer I received was: 'Yes, the Lord being my help.'"

How They Shoe Geese in Poland.

Three million geese are brought regularly to the October market in Warsaw, Poland. Often coming from remote provinces, many of these geese have to travel over long distances upon roads which would wear out their feet if they were not "shod." For this purpose they are driven through tar poured over the ground, and then through sand. After the operation has been repeated several times the feet of the geese become covered with a hard crust.

Same Old Style of Cooking.

Prof. Snuggs—Strange there's been no improvement made in cooking in the last 2000 years. Now, down at my boarding house this morning I had a steak broiled in the regular Pompeian style.

Boggs—Pompeian style? How do you mean?

Prof. Snuggs—Why, seared to a cinder on one side and covered with ashes on the other.

The Key to the Bastille.

The handle was the prison in which French kings confined political prisoners. Thousands of innocent persons were sent to this prison to avenge personal grievances of nobles of the kings, who issued "let, seve de-cacher" to their ministers and officers. The cause of the arrest was nowhere recorded, and victims thus imprisoned might remain confined in the dungeons for a lifetime. In 1789 the people of Paris destroyed the bastille after liberating all its prisoners. The key was presented by Lafayette to Washington, and it now hangs in the main hall of the later mansion at Mount Vernon.

Woman Accomplished Linguist.

Miss Martine Kramers of Rotterdam, Holland, is one of the most accomplished of women linguists. She can read and speak thirteen different languages. She is the editor of Jan Suffraget, the official organ of the International Woman Suffrage Alliance. She receives reports from the different countries affiliated with the International Alliance and translates them for her paper, which is printed in English.

HUBBY CAUGHT THE FISH.

He Could Not Tell a Lie To His Wife, Hence His Method.

This may be an old one, but Mr. Thomas J. Daly tells it as O. K. He won't say who his friends it was, but he declares that he saw this fellow the other day sitting in a buggy in front of a fish dealer's, the dealer throwing fine-sized trout to him, he catching them—"one," "two," "three"—up to "twelve."

Mr. Daly says that he later asked the fish dealer what it all meant—delivering fish in such a manner.

"He told me to deliver them that way, and paid me, and that's all I know of want to know about it."

But later he got the explanation from the friend in person. "Daly, I have never yet told my wife a lie. I went fishing that day, and didn't get a bite. They expected, of course, that I would bring fish home, and I did. I knew that my wife would ask, 'Did you catch 'em all' husband?' I protected myself. When the monitor pitched them to me, you see, I caught them, didn't I? And I didn't lie to my wife when I said, 'Yes, dear, I caught them all,' did I?"

HUNTING A HOME.

"Ye ain't thinking about emmy, are ye, Wenny?"

"Yep, son's I find th' intertemp'ral zone!"

Vanderbilt, the Church and the Devil. George Vanderbilt was reading in the smoking-room of his home at Baltimore, North Carolina, recently, when looking up from his paper he saw a seely-looking individual standing down on the carriage-way, head thrown back, eyes dilated and mouth wide open, seemingly amazed at the imposing sight before him.

After watching him for some time Mr. Vanderbilt became annoyed, and looking out of the window, said, "My man, don't you know this is private property? Why are you standing there staring at my house? Do you take it for a church?"

His unwelcome visitor, after looking him over carefully as he could at the distance, replied, "Wal, I thought ye here to-night be a church till I saw the devil poke his head out o' the window."

INDIAN NAMES IN OKLAHOMA.

What Early Settlers Have Called Some of the Towns and Streams.

The cowboys, plainmen and early settlers of Oklahoma and the Indian Territory were not possessed of a highly developed poetic sense. Some of the names they bestowed upon settlements and localities were more forcible than elegant, and were inspired by some incident of the moment or by a desire to perpetuate the name of an individual. In spite of this, says the Kansas City Star, however, many of the early white settlements received Indian names that delight the ear and are eminently suited to the locality and the country.

As samples of the titles given to some Indian Territory waterways there may be mentioned Dog Creek, Five Mile Creek, Hell Roaring River, Mud, Oil and Poicet creeks. These are scarcely to be preferred to a couple with Indian names—Hiayona and We-We-ka. Some of the white man's names for towns mentioned are Boh, Grt. Amos, Bailey, Fame, Brantton, Owl, Fishertown, Beef Creek and Jintown. These may be compared with some Indian names bestowed on other localities—Alaha, We, Checooth, Lupta, Muskogee, Nowata, Okmulgee, Sequoyah, Tulequah, Wewola, Konunda, Ochelata, Tlawah and Wetunka.

Oklahoma is likewise afflicted with many rough and ready names that may have seemed highly appropriate to the pioneer but hardly answer to the purpose as permanent titles for communities that may some time become important cities. Anihiloid, Fry, Momb, Nail, Pawpaw and Kellyville are a few. On the other hand, there are such Indian names as Ataha, Klamitchi, Toles, Waukomis, Wauwika, Waynoka, Tonkawa and Ogocchoe.

Duchess Paints a Sign.

The signboard of an inn at Rosemeath, on the Clyde, was painted some time ago by the Duchess of Argyll while away a period of tedious waiting. The Duchess is, of course, well known as an artist and has for many years had a studio in Kensington Palace, where she spends many hours in painting and modeling. As a sculptor she has great ability, and her tutor the late Sir Edgar Boehm, thought very highly of her skill.—London Reader.

Women Dentists.

Dentistry does not seem to appeal to women. It is one of the professions which is not threatened by a feminine invasion. There are very few women hovering around the dental colleges.

Man's Enough Path.

Times are not always hard, but a man always needs money, for he is compelled to buy his salvation of a preacher, his health of a doctor and his rights of a lawyer.

Answered According to His Folly.

"Sometimes," said the press humorist, "I think my jokes are rotten. I suppose that's my modesty." "No," explained a friend, "that's your common sense."

THE LITTLE IS OWNED.

Great Men Occupy The Offices and Draw Big Salaries.

"Hello, Harry! How are you? You seem to have a pretty nice office here. How are you making out?"

"I am at the top of the ladder. I am the president of this mining concern."

"Is that so? You do a large business, I guess?"

"Immense. The responsibility weighs on me quite heavily, but I've got to shoulder it. No way of getting around that, you know."

"The man over there at that elegant desk is one of the officers of 'Yes. He's the secretary. And he company, I suppose?"

"Those other two men at those fine desks are his assistants. He has a wonderful amount of work to do, simply astounding! But remember, he's a first-class man. We pay him a big salary."

"The man over there behind that filing is another official, is he not?"

"Yes. That's the treasurer. He's another great man. We pay him big money; but we require a large bond. Not to do it. We handle too much money to run any risks."

"And who is that little wisened-faced old man over there in the corner at the old desk?"

"That's old Bangs. He—ah—owns the mine, you know."

KLEPTOMANIA.

Victor—So that good looking housemaid left your service.

Hostess—Yes, but that was all she left.

The Small End.

Representative Longworth, at a dinner party during the Republican Convention in Chicago, talked about honest politics.

"Honest politics alone pay in the end," said he. "Your dishonest politician comes out like Lurgan of Cincinnati."

"Lurgan of Cincinnati was canvassing for votes. He dropped in at a grocer's."

"Good morning," he said. "I may count on your support, I hope?"

"Why, no, Mr. Lurgan," said the grocer. "I've promised my support to your rival."

Lurgan laughed easily.

"Ah, but in politics," said he, "promising and performing are two different matters."

"In that case," said the grocer earnestly, "I shall be most happy to give you my promise, Mr. Lurgan."

One Hair Astray.

A guest at a fashionable hotel recently had a grouch. He carried it to the proprietor.

"Look here," he said, "things around here are just about as rotten as they make them. When I went to lunch to-day I found hair in the cream, hair in the honey and hair in the apple sauce. Now, what do you think of that? Is that a good hotel?"

"Well," replied the genial proprietor, "I can explain the hair in the cream. That likely came from the shaving of the ice. And I suppose the hair in the honey came from the comb. But I don't understand about the hair in the apple sauce. I bought those apples myself, and they were every one Bald-wins."

Too Obvious.

It was the first vaudeville performance the old colored lady had ever seen and she was particularly excited over the marvelous feats of the magician. But when he covered a newspaper with a heavy flannel cloth and read the print through it, she saw a little nervous. He then doubled the cloth and again read the letters accurately.

"This was more than she could stand, and rising in her seat, said: 'I'm going home! This ain't no place for a lady in a thin calico dress!'"

Hiding Her Time.

A Boston child, not yet in her teens and unusually precocious, with exceptional penetration asked her mother the other day: "How long mother, will it be before I get old enough for you to say that I am nervous and not naughty when I do so and so?"

An Amendment.

"What a stately creature that tall blonde is! She always makes me think of her as the ox-eyed Juno."

"Per-oxide, you mean."

Man's Enough Path.

Times are not always hard, but a man always needs money, for he is compelled to buy his salvation of a preacher, his health of a doctor and his rights of a lawyer.

The Ideal.
"Is your daughter learning to play the piano by note?"
"Certainly not," answered Mr. Cumrox severely. "We always pay cash."
A More Important Question.
"How a big Chicago firm complains that its girls will not stay single."
"Well, will they stay married?"
Improving.
"How is your son James getting on at college, Mr. Boggs?" asked the Parson.
"Fine," said Boggs. "He's getting more business-like every day."
"I am glad to hear that," said the Clergyman. "How does the lad show it?"
"Well," said Boggs, "when he first went up and wanted money, he used to write asking for it. Now he draws me at sight."
