ARMSTRONG'S

Broad & Catharine Sts. Milford, Pa

An Excerpt from Artemus Ward's Centenarian's Appearances. The eccentric female clutched me frantically by the arm and hollered: "You air mine, O you air mine!" "Scarcely," I said, endeavoring to get loose from her. But she cling to me and said: "You air my Affinity!" "What upon arth is that?" I shouted. "Doest thou not know?" "No, I doestnot!" "Listen, man, & I'll tell ye!" said the strange female: "for years I had yearned for thee. I knowed thou wast in the world, sumwheres, tho' I didn't know where. My hart aed he would cum and I took courage. He has cum - he's here - you air him - you air my Affinity. O, 'tis too much!" and she sobbed again. "Yes," I answered, "I think it is a darn air too much!" "Hast thou not yearned for me?" she yelled, ringin' her hands like a female play-actor. "Not a yearn!" I beliered at the top of my voice, throwin' her away from me - Artemus Ward, His Book: Among the Free-Lovers.

His Grump. "For years and years," grunched the Old Coder, in his usual pessimistic way, "we have been sending missionaries to the Chinese - pink-shaded and tub-shaped ones, both with side whiskers, who speak in nasal tones and acted with the chastened intolerance of hyenas; young, dried-up ones with weak eyes and weaker intellects; slimy, stinging ones, who were gathering material from which to lecture and with which to furnish a house or two when they got back; old-maid ones that looked like flying-machines or old-fashioned chairs, just as it happened; and a glorious lot of others, all of whom needed the money and just as a great deal. And, still, in spite of our benevolence to them, the ungrateful Chinese 'pear to be just as unappreciative and almost as peculiar as they were in the first place. What say?"

Four Weeks Ed. A Baltimore man was recently showing his nice-new opera-hat to his little nephew, and when he caught the top piece to spring open three or four times the youngster was delighted. A few days thereafter the uncle, during a visit to the same household, brought with him a silk hat of the shiny, non-collapse kind. When he was about to leave the house, he encountered the aforesaid youngster running down the hall with what looked like a black accordion.

"Uncle Ed," observed the boy, "this one goes awfully hard. I had to sit on it; but even then I couldn't get it over that half-bush!"

Uses All Right—Trouble it to Get the Prescription Filled.

It is all very well for a German doctor to prescribe heavy laughter as a remedy for nervous diseases, but perhaps he will also be good enough to tell us where we are to get the ingredients for his prescription.

One cannot well sit down and laugh "till the tears run down the cheeks" at nothing at all, however anxious to cure a severe attack of neuralgia.

When one comes to think of it, says the Lady's Pictorial, few things make one laugh to this extent, and what is one person's meat where similarity is concerned may prove so poisonous to another as to plunge him to the very depths of depression.

There are people who will double up with merriment when they see some one fall down a flight of steps, and afterward describe it as "the funniest thing they ever saw," but most nervous patients probably would not laugh at all if in order to effect a cure, an attempt were made to excite their hilarity by throwing relatives and servants down stairs.

Nerve specialists let us adopt the laughter cure will have either L. practice clowning or keep trained fools to set their patients "in a roar."

Are You a Kionophile?

The round white missile was well aimed, and with a laugh the professor dug the cold snow out of his ear. "I am a kionophile and so are you," he said. "In fact, we are all kionophiles, while some of us are kionomanics."

"A kionophile is a snow-lover," he explained, "one whose heart warms at the sight of the fresh white snow, one who loves the snow as Beethoven loved music. Yes, we are all kionophiles."

"A kionomanic loves the snow to madness. A snowfall makes him temporarily insane. You have seen such people—adults or children—everybody has." Beside himself, the kionomanic bounds from the house, leaps yelling into a great drift, rolls about madly, kicks and flounders in the deep snow with shrieks of joy.

There is about snow something intoxicating. Some of us it intoxicates only to kionomanism; others it drives into stark raving kionomania. In the last state, people rolling in the cold white snow, have given themselves pneumonia, and they have also severely injured their friends—broken their ribs, and so forth, banging them about in the drifts."

The Last Straw. Arthur—They say, dear, that people who live together get to look like.

Kate—Then you must consider my refusal as final.—The Christian Register.
