HE NEVER SPOKE AGAIN.

Vow Made By the Ventriloquist's Dog When Deserted.

The following story is told of a ventriloquist, now famous, but at the time of this happening, so poor that he used to walk between the stiles where he was to appear. On one of these tours he came to Philadelphia on foot, and on the road he picked up a miserable little dog "because it looked so much like he felt." The story will explain what became of the dog.

The first house he came to was a saloon, and of course he wanted a drink. He had no money, but went in anyhow to see what he could do. The proprietor, who was a German, said, "Well, what will you have?" "The answer came very promptly, 'I'll take a ham sandwich.'"

The German was so surprised he almost fainted. He looked at the dog a moment, and then asked, "What did you say?" "The dog replied, 'I said I'd take a ham sandwich.'"

Hans thought it wonderful that a dog should be able to talk, and asked who had trained him, how long he had taken, and would up with, "How much will you take for him?" "Oh," replied Mr. Ventriloquist, "I wouldn't sell him at any price, but I am a little hard up, and if you will lend me fifty dollars I'll leave him with you till I bring back the money."

"All right," said Hans, "I just want him for a little while so I can show him to some people I know around here."

So everything was settled, the money paid, the dog left with the proprietor, and as the ventriloquist went out he turned and waved his hand to the dog and said, "Well, good-bye, Jack. I'll come back soon."

The dog looked at him, and said, "You mean, despicable man, to take me for fifty dollars after all I've done for you! So help me Moses, I'll never speak another word so long as I live!" And he did it.

Tit for Tat.
A few days ago two young ladies hailed a trolley, entered it, and found only standing room. One of these whispered to her companion:

"I'm going to get a seat from one of these men. You take notice."

She looked down the row of men and selected a sedate gentleman who bore the general settled appearance of a married man. She called up to him and boldly opened fire:

"My dear Mr. Green! How delighted I am to meet you! You are almost a stranger. Will I accept your seat? Well I do feel tired, I heartily admit. Thank you, so much."

The sedate gentleman—a total stranger, of course—looked, listened, then quietly arose and gave her his seat, saying:

"Sit down, Jane, my girl. Don't often see you out on a washing-day. You must feel tired, I'm sure. How's your mistress?"

The young lady got her seat, but lost her vivacity.

Buying Pooder for the Newlyweds.
The newly married couple had just moved into their new home. On the morning after their arrival a baker called to solicit their trade. He found the young wife in the kitchen. After explaining that his wagon delivered once a day, the baker asked, "And may we have your trade, madam?"

"And about how much bread will you want each day?"

"Well, I don't know exactly. You see, there are only two of us." Then doubtfully, "Would five loaves a day be enough, do you think?"

Fear Little Girl.
Little Helen, who is a grand child and aged just three, was annoying her father, one day, by her almost endless chatter. He was endeavoring to finish some important writing, so said:

"Run away, dear, Daddy is very busy." Helen toddled off, and after the space of about five minutes returned and standing behind her father's chair laid an appealing hand on his arm, and looked up into his face with a most piteous air, said, "Daddy, I'm very lonely—I can't find any one to leave myself with."

Pair Warning.
"You see a likely looking chap," said the gift-tongued proprietor of the summer hotel, "and there are lots of pretty girls around here. Why not spend your time love-making?"

"I may," responded the young man on vacation, "but there is just one thing I wish to impress upon your mind."

"And what is that?"

"I am not one of those cheap who would rather make love than eat."

NEW KITCHEN CABINET.
Brand, Cakes, Spices and Flour All in Same Place in this Box.

In household affairs as well as in business the best results are obtained where there is a minimum of lost energy. Systems can be as carefully followed in the kitchen as in the counting house, and a good cook never runs around in a kitchen looking for a lost ingredient while the coffee boils. In these days of busy doctors, however, there is no excuse for the losing anything. For use in the kitchen this Chicago man has designed a cabinet which keeps a variety of articles at the cook's elbow and saves her the Saves Cook Worry.

Necessity of hunting for them. The top of the cabinet, which is tall enough to stand on the floor, is divided into a series of small compartments, each with a separate lid for spices. Below this is another compartment, a trifle larger, for miscellaneous articles. This comes a still larger space for cakes, the largest space of all for bread, and a drawer with a semi-circular bottom for flour.

Art in the Country Home.
We neglect the corners of our rooms too much. Fine effects can be secured by hanging long and narrow pictures there. Try this, and see if I am not right. Corners are excellent places for sprightly flower pictures.

Great care must be taken to hang pictures covered with glass in positions where the light will not strike them in such a manner as to cause reflections, as from a mirror. All pictures under glass are most effective on walls which do not face windows.

Never buy a picture that doesn't please you because a friend urges you to do so. You are buying for yourself, thereby let your own taste decide the matter. You may not have what is called "a cultivated taste," but you can tell when a picture pleases you as well as if you had all the cultivation in the world, and that's the criterion for the purchaser to judge a picture by—Does it please?

A picture need not be expensive to be good. Really fine ones can be bought cheaply. A good picture has as much of a mission in the family as a good book has. Books, pictures, music and flowers are the four apostles of the gospel of the beautiful in the home.

Roman Cooks and Clocks.
It is pretty well established that the citizens of the Eternal City went on for more than six centuries without any accurate means of knowing the time either by night or day. The Council of Eighty, in 1482, set up in Rome a public clock, or water clock, the first clockmaker in the history of the city, waiting the ordinary sun dial. The prices paid even for the most luxurious days of Rome, for exquisite cooks were not up to those of to-day, the highest salary being 100,000 sesterces (45,000), while some soiled chefs of to-day receive $10,000.

Bringing It to a Climax.
"I know what's passing in your mind," suddenly said the maiden as the habitually silent caller stared at her. "I know, too, why you are calling here night after night, appropriating my time to yourself and keeping other nice, young men away. You want me to marry you, don't you?"

"I-I do!" gasped the young man.

"I thought so. Very well; I will."

All Wants Supplied.
Book Agent—Can I sell you a copy of Lobette's "Memory System?"

Banker—Not much, young man. I don't need it—my memory is perfect.

Course and Effect.
The Earl of Essex (dramatically)—Wish I just had a million, and ten pence ahead of me.

Baron Bessing—Well, you grab the ten pence all right, all right.

TIPPING HIS CUSTOMER.

Fruit Stand Men Get an Idea How to Change a Big Bill.

The fruit stand keeper near the ferry slip had made a fairly large sale, but when the customer handed him a five dollar bill his face became gloomy.

"I can't change that," he said. "Well, get it from the ticket office," said the buyer; "but hurry, because the boat will be going out in a minute."

The fruit seller took the bill and went over to the ticket window. The agent refused to change the bill and said:

"I've refused you a hundred times before. I tell you I can't do it."

The stand keeper didn't want to lose the sale and it looked as if he was going to. Then, an idea struck him.

"Here," he said to the buyer, "you take the bill and buy four tickets with it and I'll let you take it out of the price of the fruit."

So the customer got his ride free.

The Lesser of Two Evils.
On the first Sunday of their visit in Chicago the successful merchant escorted his parents to a fashionable church. Some of the hymns were familiar, and in their rendition the visiting pair contributed heavily; with the credit for volume in favor of the father.

Although not always in exact time, had sometimes in discord, yet the joy of the good couple leaped forth in joyous praise, and they did not see the glowering looks of nearby worshippers or the flushed face of their devoted son.

"Father," observed the merchant that afternoon, while his mother was taking her accustomed nap, "in our church the congregation does very little singing; it is left entirely to the choir."

"I know, my boy," said the old gentleman, as he lovingly placed a hand on his son's shoulder, "that it was very embarrassing to you this morning, but if I hadn't sung so loudly as I did the people would have heard your mother."—Youth's Companion.

A Pound of Honey.
"When you eat a spoonful of honey you have very little notion as to the amount of work and travel necessary to produce it. To make one pound of clover honey, bees must deprive 2,000 clover blossoms of their nectar, and to do this requires 3,750,000 visits to the blossoms by the bees."

In other words, one bee, to collect enough nectar to make one pound of honey, must go from hive to flower and back 2,750,000 times. Thus, when you think how far these bees sometimes fly in search of these clover fields, often more than one or two miles from the hive, you will begin to get a small idea of the number of miles one of the industrious little creatures must travel in order that you may have the pound of honey that gives them so much trouble.

It may also help you to understand why the bee is unobtainable enough to sting if you get in its way. When you go to work on land to accomplish an end, it is quite surprising to be interrupted with.

Curious Indian Totem.
The government of Eastern Bengal and Assam is publishing a series of pamphlets on the relatively unknown people of eastern India and the bordering Assam. These are the Mikirs, who live north of the Dihangpoo River, and the Meks, who inhabit Manipal. The customs of the Mikirs are also interesting for having suggested to British officers the charms of the game of polo. A curious custom among them is the selection of a man who gives his sons to the feet and feet (right) months before all the sons of his people. His personal good or ill fortune is supposed to influence the luck of the whole country.
