LARGE FEES TO DOCTORS.

King Edward's Health Has Cost a Princely Sum.
King Edward's health has cost a huge sum. When, as Prince of Wales, he was seriously ill some years ago, Dr. William Jenner attended him for four weeks and received a fee of £10,000. Another £10,000 was paid to Sir Walter Gill for his attendance on the king during his serious illness from typhoid in 1871, while the physicians who attended him during his severe illness in the coronation year received fees amounting to £20,000.

The famous Prof. Zacherine, of Moscow, received from the father of the present emperor of Russia, a fee of £15,000 for two days' attendance. Sir Morell Mackenzie received £20,000 for a few weeks' attendance on the late Emperor Frederick of Germany, and Queen Victoria's doctors in her last illness, received £1,000 each.

Some time ago W. K. Vanderbilt the American millionaire, requested his physician to accompany him on a voyage. The doctor hesitated, and remarked that his practice was worth £200 a week. The man of money finally agreed to give him £2,000 for the six weeks' trip and pay all his other expenses.

Blind Dr. Gale, of Bristol, was paid the sum of £50,000 for curing the diseased knee of a wealthy gentleman. Senator Maize paid Dr. Browning the stupendous fee of £200,000—undoubtedly the largest fee on record. The late shah of Persia paid Dr. Galazowski, of Paris, £5,000 for curing him of an affection of the eye. Dr. Frank Billings claimed £5,000 for seven days' attendance on Marshall Field, the Chicago merchant prince.—London Tit-Bits.

Gambling in Funerals.
A curious point was disclosed in the House of Lords debate on the Assurance Companies bill. Lord St. Aldwyn said that under the existing law—which had never been observed—policies to meet the funeral expenses of a parent were illegal.

There had thus grown up, he said a system under which collectors had visited houses and persuaded women to insure a sum to cover the funeral expenses of persons in whom they had no insurable interest. The whole thing was really a gamble.

Lord Hamilton, of Dales (for the government), said that the position might be very unfortunate unless legislation took place such as was proposed. There was danger that something like a panic, with disastrous results, might ensue. The government had been in communication with the collecting societies and industrial assurance companies, who, having had a very great fright in consequence of recent legal decisions, understood that if the government got them out of the hole they found themselves in they would put their house in order.—London Daily Mail.

Uncouth Pranks.
In a little town in the South a prominent man of the town, who had turned many a favor for the local negroes, had died, and the colored folk had asked to be allowed to follow the body to the cemetery, and to be permitted to speak a word or two in praise at the grave, which request had been granted.

Old Abraham Lincoln George Washington Lee acted as spokesman. He told of the many kindnesses shown to the colored people by the deceased and finished his eulogy with the words: "Massa Akison may have been white man, my brudder, but he sh'd have a black heart."

Caught a Motor Boat.
During some firing exercises off St Albans Head by two men of war, a wire by which the target was being lowered parted. The target was picked up, but instead of the wire coming in easily it was found to be made fast to something. Recorders had to the steam captain and it was seen that the wire was pulled up when the end of it was found to be securely hitched around the screw of a motor boat.

THE CORPSE'S EXCURSION.

Death is a Spicinn Affair But So is Economy.
Cal White stuck his head in through the ticket window of Salters Depot railroad station and said: "Boss, gimme two round-trip tickets to Society Hill—one for myself and one for a corpse."
"I never heard of nobody buying excursion tickets for corpses," said the agent. "What's the meaning?"
"Well, boss," Cal replied, "my brother Webster died yesterday, and I want to take the corpse up to Society Hill and let the family view the remains, and then I'll bring him back to Salters Depot here and bury him. That'll be a big sight cheaper than for the whole family to traipse all the way from Society Hill and all the way back again."

A Real Bargain.
"Have you Hike's Baking Powder?" inquired the female bargainer.
"No, madam," answered the wily grocery clerk; "but we have Hike's, which is just as good, but costs thirteen cents more, and contains a coupon, which, when presented with 9,999 similar coupons, entitles the holder to one guest at the number of minutes from now until the end of the world, the one coming nearest to a correct solution being rewarded with a certificate good for one round subscription to 'The Cooks' and Laundry-maid's Gazette,' when accompanied by 25 cents in cash."
She bought Hike's and went away perfectly happy.

Disenchanted.
"Yes," she admitted, with a sad little sigh, "there was a time when I thought him the grandest man in the world—when I thought that nothing could ever make me cease to love him."
"Well," her friend replied, "I suppose we are all doomed to these disenchanted experiences. We have only to become acquainted with a man to discover that he is not the god we have supposed him to be."
"But it wasn't becoming acquainted with him that destroyed my ideal. I am sure that I could still think him splendid if I had never seen him in riding breeches!"

Got Them Mixed.
There is an amusing story in which John Hay, Bret Harte and Mrs. Humphrey Ward figure. Mrs. Ward had never met Bret Harte before, but had read "Little Breeces," and supposed Bret Harte was its author. Hay, while ambassador to England, introduced Harte to Mrs. Ward. "I am so glad to meet you, Mr. Harte," said she. "For a long time I have known and admired your 'Little Breeces.'" Harte looked at Hay; Hay looked at Harte. Then the latter said: "I beg your pardon, Mrs. Ward, but you have put the 'Little Breeces' on the wrong man."

THE MISTRESS'S OBJECTION.
"Mary, after the week is out I sha'n't need your services," the boarding house keeper told her cook; "your cooking doesn't suit me."
"But the boarders seem to like it, ma'am!"
"Yes. That's why I must get another cook."—The Bohemian.

Justifiable Assault.
"Tommy, I will have to whip you for fighting when I said you mustn't. What were you and Jimmy White quarreling about?"
"Why, morn, he said you were ten years older than his mother, and I told him he was a liar!"
"Well, Tommy, I don't approve of your fighting, but under the circumstances—Here's a quarter for you, and I'll ask your papa to take you to the moving-picture show to-night."

Average of Fatal Accidents.
In connection with the present activity with regard to the reduction of fatalities in coal mines it is of interest to compare the following average of fatal accidents a thousand employees: Anthracite miners, Pennsylvania, 3.18; miscellaneous steel and iron workers, Pennsylvania, 4.50; nut and bolt workers, Pennsylvania, 5.40; railway employees, United States, 2.59.

The Moon's Troubles.
The sun attracts both the earth and the moon, and as they are always either at different distances from the sun, they will be differently attracted by the sun; and hence their relative motions will be disturbed. Thus rise the perturbations of the moon's apparent motion.

SAVAGES LOVE MEDICINE.

Medical Missionary Tells Stories of Her Patients.
Mrs. F. Rowling, medical missionary at Garsden, Ecuador, tells many stories about her patients and their implicit faith in the skill and knowledge of "the white medicine woman." What she has to say on the matter is as amusing as it is interesting and instructive, and serves to illustrate a curious trait of the savage mind that has been commented upon by travelers in practically all parts of the world—viz, the naive delight which natives take in sampling the white man's drugs. It matters not whether the medicine be palatable or nauseous, they must have it if it is to be obtained.

"The native patients," says Mrs. Rowling, "are most amusing in the implicit faith they have in the mesozo (doctor), as they call Miss Pilgrim, the dispenser here. Anything she likes to give them they take, but many of them cannot get one how a pain in the head can be cured by swallowing a pill, and would much prefer to rub the pill on the place affected. One day we visited a woman with a bad pain in the ear. We gave her two pills to swallow, but instead of doing so she proceeded to drop them into her ear. Another tried to put her medicine up her nostrils."

The Jeweler's Diagnosis.
"Can you tell me what's the matter with this watch?" inquired the Average Looking Man anxiously.
The jeweler stuck a dice box in his eye and glanced at the instrument's inward. Then he looked up.
"You find it necessary to shake it real hard every now and then to start it going, don't you?" he inquired.
"That's right."
"And you find that it gets dusty don't you. Perhaps you don't blow hard enough on the works?"
"Oh, yes, I do—every day."
"Well, well! But are you careful to start the balance wheel going with a toothpick every hour or two?"
"Yes, I do that, too."
"And in spite of all your precautions, it needs about five dollars' worth of repairs. It's very strange." For the jeweler possessed a dry and sarcastic wit.

Opposes Course in Cobbling.
A suggestion that shoe repairing or cobbling, be made a part of the manual training activities in the graded schools and in the Parents' School of Baltimore has been read to the authorities, but the Sun of that city sees no merit in the scheme. It says: "That class of boys who would desire to become cobblers or who would profit by learning the trade have, as a rule, only a few years to devote to school, and those few years had best be devoted to learning how to read, write and cipher, with such other practical and necessary elementary studies as their time will permit."

Dickens Family Lost Big Fortune.
Dickens was one of the most successful financially of all authors. His was no case of genius starving in a garret. "Pickwick" placed him above want at 25, and for a period of 36 years following its publication it brought him a princely income from his writings. His American tour brought him $50,000. His estate at his death in 1870 was estimated at $400,000. That his grandchildren should now be in need of the trifling pension bestowed on them is a painful illustration of the vicissitudes of family fortune.

In Defence of the Owl.
I find a good many nests robbed here, not by owls, which are usually innocent in this respect, but by raptorial squirrels.
This year we lost egg after egg from our nest and finally trapped the culprit, an old rat, with an egg in its mouth. Some time ago we caught a squirrel in the act of pulling up an eating your marrow from a nest.

Boswell in Bronze.
Boswell is to stand in bronze marble by Johnson's side at Lichfield. Perhaps Mrs. Boswell's angry spirit may be appeased in Paradise. It is reported that she likes to see her lord playing second fiddle, and especially playing it with such an unfeeling devoted secondariness. Mrs. Boswell's irritation found relief in the memorable epigram that, though she had often seen a bear led by a man she had never before seen a man led by a bear.—Dundee Advertiser.

Spent Much on Mars Living.
The English workman spends three fifths of his wages for food.
Scale of Values.
"He forgets that he owes me his life!"
"That's nothing; he even forgets that he owes me his!"

Definition Up to Date.
Pat—An' please the devil be a chaffin' bird.
Mike—Whist! 'Tis a flyin' possum's got into society."
LIMIT OF EFFICIENCY.
An Unanswerable Argument in Favor of Short Sermons.
The Yale tradition spoken of below must be of nineteenth century origin, for the Connecticut divines of the days when Yale was founded would hardly have put in their "secondly" in the time allowed.
