

Under the new road law enlarging the powers of road supervisors and the requirement of a cash tax, there is no reason why, if proper officialare elected, the county should not have good roads, or at least a great improvement in them. Money judiciously spent and work intelligently done mis' show beneficial results. The practice of patching roads or making the repairs in a temporary way is not profitable, because not permanent. Whatever is done should be well and substantially finiabed. One great detriment to making roads good is allowing water to stand on, god on hills allowing it to run down over the road. FISHES WITH ITS WING

A Dusty Spot. Most of the Negro messengers at a doors of Cabinet members and Naturalist's Observation on the Sty Way of the Cassowary.

Habits of the cormorant and of our native fish hawk are generally known. Their methods of taking fish are very much like those of birds of prey. But the cassowary fishes according to a method of its own. A well known naturalist witnessed its operations on a river in the island of New Britain. He saw a cassowary come down to the water's edge and stand for some minutes apparently watching the way ter carefully. It then stepped into the river where it was about three feet deep, and partially squatting down, spread its wings out, submerging them, the feathers being spread and ruffled

The bird remained motionless, and kept its eyes closed as if in sleep. It remained in this position for a quer-tor of an hour when suddenly closing its wings and straightening its feath-ers it stepped out on the bank. Here it shook itself several times, who eupon a quantity of small fishes feel out of its wings and from amid 'ts feathers. These the bird immediate-ly picked up and swallowed. The fishes had evidently mistaken the feathers for a kind of weed but grows in the water along the builts of the river in this island and w' ch much renemble the feathers of he cassowary. The smallest fishes de in these woods to avoid the 1ones that prey on them .- St. Paul neor Press.
