WOMEN'S WORK IN BANKS.

Some Play a Part in Getting and Handling Feminine Patronage.

In addition to the stereotyped duties usually performed by men in a bank many women have made new positions for themselves, some as managers of women's departments, where they explain carefully and patiently the mysteries of banking to other women, to whose minds anything that pertains to finance seems quite as puzzling as the black arts. Such a woman, says the Bookkeeper, must know thoroughly every detail of banking, for her duties will cover a wide field—from making out a check for some dear old lady to explaining the uses of a letter of credit to a party of school teachers contemplating their first trip abroad.

Nerve Timing.
A strange instance of the care and maintenance with which the human body is now studied in the effort to understand its powers and functions better, is furnished by a paper read recently at a meeting of the Royal Society in London on the "Rapidly of the Nervous Impulse in Tall and Short Individuals." Even the difference in time required for a "nerve telegram" to traverse the bodies of different persons is regarded as a matter of scientific importance.

A series of observations has shown that the length of the nerve does not affect the velocity with which an impulse passes between the brain and the extremities, and consequently that more than if it is short. It follows that a short man should feel a step or his horns quicker than a tall man, but the difference is so slight that the offender has no better chance of escape in one case than in the other.—The Sunday Magazine.

"The Auld Brig o' Doon."
Lord Roseberry has done well to protest against the proposed demolition of the Brig of Ayr. The town council of Ayr calls it rebuilding. But as Lord Roseberry says, the resources of engineering should be adequate to preserve a structure which is almost sacred. Indeed, were there no sentiment left for Burns in the land he did so much to celebrate, the secure existence of the Brig should suffice to save a landmark that is yearly coined into good money. How many travelers would care a rap for Ayr without the old bridge?—Providence Journal.

Suspicious.
The father of Judge W. H. Wadhams had a chicken-coop and a dog and a stable hand. It began to look to Mr. Wadhams as though some one had discovered the combination. So he kept the coop and the stable hand, but he got a new dog. Next day the bent old negro who groomed the Wadhams' horses came to him. "You lost your affection for me, boss?" he asked. "No, Scipio," said Mr. Wadhams. "I like you as well as ever." "Then," said Scipio, peevishly, "why'n't you the Old Rover in de chicken-coop, 'stid of dat new dog?"

Feeding School Children.
Profiting by the experience of several American cities which provide food at cost for their school children, the London county council has about decided on a similar system in some of the schools of the metropolis. Parents having asked that meals be supplied at school to their children who are not "necessitous," the county council authorities are planning to grant the applications, payment to be made in advance, the charge to be calculated to the nearest farthing.

Name to Fit the Trade.
Old newspapers give us many instances of men's names fitting their callings. Thus we have Last, shoe-maker of Exeter, and Tredaway, who plied the same trade in Hammersmith. There was a Bristol schoolmaster named Rod. Dodge and Wyrne, attorneys at law of Liverpool, must have been the butts of their fellow townsmen, while few could have a more appropriate name than the Primitive Methodist preacher River Jordan.—London Chronicle.

Logic That the Dogmatic Never Could Refute.
Colonel Ed. Butler, the veteran St. Louis politician, has been in falling health the past few years. On his last visit to Kansas City he was talking to an old friend, a physician. "Doc," said the Colonel, "I wish you would tell me what is the matter with my right leg. The left one is in good shape, but this right one has been growing gradually weaker for two years and at times it pains me a great deal."

Questioning developed that he had not had a fall or strain, or hurt the suffering member in any way. "It can be caused by only one thing," said the physician, "and that is old age. You must remember, Colonel, you are no longer a young man."

Contradictory Evidence.
"Dr. Fan," said the office patient, "my name is Griddle. I'm troubled lately with headache, and I'd like to get relief. It can't be from my eyes, for they're all right."
"Let me see, what is your vocation?"
"I'm a baseball umpire."
"Say," rejoined Dr. Fan, "are you the man that umpired the game yesterday?"
"Yes."
"I was there, and I'll tell you right here, Mr. Ump—or Mr. Griddle, rather—that there's something the matter with your eyes!"
