J. H. VAN ETTEN, PUBLISHER.

It may be due some of our readers to explain why the Press, which was founded as and professes to be a republican paper, did not support the candidate of the party, Tener, for Governor. The reasons are brief. He was not in our judgment nominated by a convention which fairly represented the people. Instance the delegate from this county, who in no sense could be considered its representative because he probably knew nothing of and cared less for the real sentiment of our republicans. There are perhaps scores of men in the commonwealth who stand head and shoulders above Tener in ability, experience and fitness for the position. Why was not one of them selected. What influence predominated which set all such names aside and put that of Tener on the ticket. Then when his dealings with the utilities corporation were exposed and enough shown, in face of his denial, to convict him to say the least of most culpable carelessness in becoming president of the concern and by his name and reputation including would be investors to assume that it was as represented, when an investigation of its assets and the character of the men promoting the scheme would have satisfied any prudent business men that it was unsound, why was not the ticket relieved of the weight and some other name substituted. We think the time has gone by when any party should be compelled to go through a campaign defending the reputation of a man who cannot fairly clear his own skirts. It may be that leaders will not learn the lesson to select men for high office whose characters are unassailable but we want it handed down for our children to read that if they do not we will not stultify our conscience for the few remaining years we may live by lending such doubtful reputations our support, and in the face of our better judgment call on our readers to condone iniquity and clothe it with the robes of office.

Election is over and in many respects the contest in several states was fought out on different lines from any heretofore laid down. To an extent a third party became an important factor drawing as it did its strength from the two old parties and it was impossible to forestall just how great the defection was. This set afloat calculations at naught and left regular nominees largely at sea as to their strength. This third party was composed of many who have long followed the footsteps of so called leaders without questioning closely purposes or results. The party name was sufficient to awaken their enthusiasm and control their suffrage. Finally certain propositions began to arouse their interest. The control by corporations, Wall Street influence, high cost of living, corruption in high places in both the old parties, and the preaching of a doctrine of divine righteousness by one greatly respected and by many revered. People began to think for themselves and the more they thought the more they became satisfied that they were being blindly led by crafty politicians for their own gain. A spirit of revolution was aroused and it grew opaque. Aftertime leaders could not or would not read the signs of the times and did not heed the mutterings of the storm until it fell upon them. We do not wish so seem pessimistic, but there must be a radical change in political methods or the people will create a revolution. Predatory wealth must give up or share some of its gains. There must be more honesty in high places. High finance must come to the level of open and fair business methods. The rights and interests of the common people must be better conserved or they will take matters in their own hands and perhaps veer as far toward socialism as those who now wrong them lean toward their oppression.

Delaware township does not seem grateful for favors received. With what grace now can her people go to Mr. Marvin and ask for further efforts in their behalf. They repudiate his kindly intentions. If, however, he should be successful in obtaining free bridges they cannot escape the benefit though they may regret the bounty.

Mr. Marvin no doubt feels grateful to his democratic friends who stood by him, and now that he is elected will serve all the people of the county regardless as to whether he received their support. He has proven himself earnest in obtaining appropriations and will not let his zeal in that direction waver.

Adams made a good canvass and for a beginner met with excellent success. He cannot asperse his party because all in it did not stand by him. Many believed that he could not serve them as well as his opponent and in this they were sincere, and so laid aside their political preferences.

Harvey Huffman came close to defeat. He only got through by the skin of his teeth. The close margin must have surprised himself and his friends, but a man never really finds out what he is until he runs for office.

Progressive republicans aided democrats Tuesday to rout standpaters and bust the Cannon.

STOVE WOOD Furnished at $2.25 a load. Mail order given prompt attention. Milford Pa., Nov. 23, 1909 J. W. Kiesel.

On took a rise at Bayonne N. J. Wednesday morning. Forty thousand barrels of kerosene in a tank went up with a roar which shook the earth for miles and broke hundreds of windows. The noise was heard fifty miles away. The very latest returns indicate that Harvey Huffman has an apparent majority over Lewis of 252. Geo. W. Kipp is probably elected to Congress in the Wayne-Susquehanna district over Pratt by a small majority. Wayne County gave Berry a majority over Tener of 904. Tener had 1845, Grim 791 and Berry 2669. Fourth for Representatives had 1433 and Jackson 2278. Lewis majority over Huffman was 177. Lewis majority in Carbon was 1222. Huffman carried Monroe by 1859 and Pike by 253, but these figures may not be exact except as to Pike. Evidently it is neck and neck with Huffman 252 ahead.

GLASSES FOR WORRY.

Doctor Describes Novel and Inexpensive Cure for "Nerves." When your nerves are on edge and you are in the blues, you should, it appears, look out on the world through glasses—not colored or rose—but of peacock blue! Are you tired, irritable, overworked, "jumpy," in want of a holiday? Do you feel that you need green fields and the cool splash of running water? Are you inclined to despair because at the time you cannot obtain such luxuries? Despair no longer. Buy a pair of blue spectacles, which can be got for half a crown or so at any oculist's. Here is the explanation given to the London Daily Mirror by a doctor who himself frequently uses the latest nerve soother. "When a man is badly in need of a holiday, or when his nerves are on edge from the worry, anxiety and bustle of modern life in town, he instinctively longs for the green of the country," he says. "Not actually, as might be thought, from a desire to get away from the bustle and hurry. The reason lies deeper—in the well-known physiological fact that red rays of light are exciting; green or blue are soothing. Most people know now that a red-room is the worst possible surrounding for anyone who is excitable, or whose nerves are overstrung. A blue or green room, on the contrary, has a quieting and soothing effect. Now, in ordinary town life, the red rays predominate, though there may be no actual red about, or very little. In the country the reverse is the case—green fields, green trees, blue sky make up the view. Whether in town or country, the rays operate on the brain through the eyes. When one's nerves are overwrought, therefore, the obvious remedy is to go into the country or take refuge in a blue or green room. But we cannot all do either, and to those who cannot, my advice is—buy a pair of blue spectacles. The best that I have discovered by experiment is peacock blue. Why this exact shade is the best I do not, as a matter of fact, know, but it undoubtedly is. Each glass should not, of course, be worn for too long a time, because they might affect the eyes themselves, but the soothing effect of putting them on for an hour or so when worried or 'jumpy' must be experienced to be believed."

A Theory. "Infant prodigies are hard to understand," said the man who is easily impressed. "I don't think so," replied Miss Cayenne. "As a rule they are simply young people with highly imaginative parents."

Good Example. Mrs. Crittendon—Here's an item which says that the swan outlives any other bird, in extreme cases reaching three hundred years. Mrs. Crittendon—And remember, John, the swan lives on water.

Like An Auto. "My boy, remember a wife is a good deal like an automobile." "How so, dad?" "Because getting one isn't so terribly difficult, but the cost of maintenance is something frightful."
