HOW TO SUCCEED:

New rules to bring success to u woman were given by Dr. Addi on Moore, leader of the Rocksfeller Bible Class, in the Fifth Avenue Beptist Church. Incidentally "Inck" was declared to be something that ever did and never will exist. "There is no such thine as luck." Dr. Moore said, "What seems like s siece of chance good fortune is invaliably the result of conscious or unoscious preparation, frequently go ng back for years." A simple rule for success and on which Dr. Moore declares is infalliole, was given by him as follows: "To be a success is to so live you iffe that it shall cause no one to los aith in you or in the world." Dr. Moore then said that there i no sex in success."

"Success, real success," he said "is slmest a purely ideal thing. Nobody goes so high that he desires to go no ligher. Men are like the skyscraper chitects they build up a twenty story success and immediately set to work on a forty-story structure.

"Fame and prosperity are only to idental, not the essential accompani sent of success. If I were to for nulate a single rule for succeeding o life I should say Find the work you like best and then do it with all mur might, in

Dr. Moore declared that the person loing work that he dislikes is bound to Itil.

"A rich man who made his mory in business, when a thousand stiffed impulses were crying to him o become an artist if he starved," said Dr. Moore, "is infinitely more of a fallure than some poor painter who makes a bare living and perhaps never will do any better.

Success la married life, Dr. Moore said, was all based on the element of rust that must exist between hus band and wife.

"The unhappiness of married life all goes back to a lack of trust on the part of either husband or wife," he said. "The woman who, even if -be does nothing technically wrong acts in such a way as to shake her husband's faith in her, fails as a

"The man whose comings and go ngs lay him open to suspicton, ever f there is actually no fact to justify he suspiciou, fails as a husband.

"Married people live successfully when each can look back at the enof the day and feel that no deed of his has injured the faith or feelings of the other.

"The qualities essential for attain ng the successful life are honor, loy alty, unselfishness, love of work and cheerfulness."

He entered his office when he was dune and was standing in front of a win low watching his little daughter Anna when suddenly he fell breakng the window and lodging in it His son George R., who was just outdde the office, with the help of thers, laid him on the floor but he was unconscious and in a few minutes reathed his last.

He was a son of the late Rosen cauce C. and Jemima, Westfall, Ball, and was born in Westfall towndrip January 5, 1845. He received is early education in the Milford schools and after attended Mt. Reirement Seminary near Deckertown, N. J. He then taught here and as the same time read law with the late Hon. D. M. Van Auken. On his admission to the bar in 1867 he entered into partnership with his preceptor, who was then in Congress, which association he continued until 1871 Naturally during the absence of Mr. Van Auken the responsibility of his arge practice fell mostly to the care of Mr. Bull which gave him wide experience and broadened his know! sdge of the law. When he opened an office for himself he was wel equipped to take a leading position at the bar, and which he has since sotained. He was methodical in habits, studious in preparing his cases ecacious in his positions and able in presenting his evidence. He had a good legal mind and keen acumen in discerning what was strong on his side and weak on the part of his adversary. He was pleasant socially, a good conversationalist, abounding in reminiscence and had an excellent nemory. Upright in his dealings, scrupulously honest, he was faithful to the interests of his clients and made them his friends.
